BANK MAN SLAIN IN CAMBRIDGE HOLDUP

Today

$2,000,000 for Fish
For Negro Workers
Business and Religion
Discouraging Pilots

—By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1925, by The Star Co.

IN CHICAGO, where this is written, John G. Shedd yesterday signed his name to an agreement under which he will supply $2,000,000 to build the world's largest aquarium, in Grant Park.

Thus, all over the United States men that have worked hard all their lives, and built up fortunes with the help of the people, give back the money to the people among whom they earned it.

THE ROCKEFELLERS have given away hundreds of millions, a sum larger than the combined total fortunes of all the richest men in America when John D. Rockefeller was a boy.

Some give directly, others indirectly. Henry Ford, in his voluntary increases of wages, "gives away" at least fifty millions every year.

MR. SHEDD'S gift of a great aquarium is money well spent. It will increase the supply of public information.

If to the exhibition of strange creatures of the oceans and lakes the John G. Shedd gift could include some plan for economical distribution among the people of the food that comes from the ocean, that would add to the value of the gift.

A PLAN TO get rid of sharks that destroy billions of valuable fish every year, and the small savage whales that prey upon the great schools of salmon in the Northwest, would be worth millions in increased food value.

COMMUNIST LEADERS are said to be active in a negro labor movement, seeking to establish a Communist negro labor organization.

Intelligent colored men can guess what that would lead to, and where the white men would land them in a "Communist drive."

HOWEVER, the intelligent colored man will realize that property is so hard to get and keep as to make Communism, the idea of dividing up what you have, distinctly unattractive.

Communists urge the colored workers to work for their race and to help "the white proletariat." Colored men will do well to concentrate on getting and keeping good jobs for the black proletariat. The whites have a considerable capacity for taking care of themselves.

JUDGE HOLDOM of Chicago, talking of business combined with religion, says: "Silas L. Bryan, father of William Jennings Bryan, was an Illinois judge and opened his court with prayer. His decisions were uniformly reversed by the Supreme Court."

A certain Chicago banker, more than thirty years ago, opened his bank with prayer. The bank was closed by the sheriff.

THAT, HOWEVER, doesn't show that it is a bad thing to mix business and religion. It only shows that business can go to the bad, even with religion added.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE learns, by testimony given before his aircraft committee yesterday, that the War Department has thoroughly discouraged American pilots.

There can't be any doubt about that. There ought not to be any doubt about a change in methods, or about the establishment of a separate flying force.

ONCE MORE, how will the opponents of a separate air force answer these questions?

Why have we separate Army and Navy Departments? Isn't it because the army and navy are different, and require special knowledge and ability?

And isn't the flying department different from the army and navy, and doesn't it require special ability?

A YOUNG Chicago bootlegger answering in court the question: "What is your business?" Replies calmly: "I am a bootlegger"; then tells how, with thousands and tens of thou-

FOUR DARING THUGS ESCAPE WITH $10,226 AFTER SHOOTING TWO

Edward H. Ross of No. 36 Ferry street, Lexington, driver of a Central Trust Company, Cambridge, bank car, was killed today by three armed thugs, who escaped with a $10,226 payroll, consigned to the Ward Baking Company, No. 140 Albany street, Cambridge.

Rufus A. Johnson, of No. 161 Eliot street, Newton, messenger for the bank, was wounded in the head during the thug fusillade, but William H. O'Toole, of No. 22 Bigelow street, Cambridge, bank guard, escaped injury.

The slain driver, Ross, was a 21-year-old Boston University student, working his way through college through employment as chauffeur for the bank.

Today's was Johnson's second experience as a holdup victim while employed by the Central Trust Co. as a messenger. On March 25, 1924, he was held up in Albany street, near the holdup scene of today, by armed thugs, and was robbed of a $2,000 payroll.

The thugs, after seizing up the payroll, thrown in a bag from out the bank car, that was halted in front of the baking company plant, whirled off in a big touring car bear-

MITCHELL BARES NEW CHARGE BEFORE COURT

Washington, Sept. 29 (A.P.)—Colonel William Mitchell today resumed his onslaught against the nation's air policies before President Coolidge's investigating board.

To the click of cameras and flashing of photograpic apparatus, the former assistant chief of the army air service began his testimony, first asking that he be sworn. He had spread before him a large map of the world and two aides carried voluminous documentary exhibits.

The board declined to place him under oath and assured him his testimony would be given credence.

Colonel Mitchell had nine papers he desired to read, all "instructive," except one which was "destructive," and which he said he would not read if the board objected.

In America the development of aircraft has been "slow and inefficient," he said.

"No surface vessel can exist so

LUFKIN KEEPS HIS JOB AS U. S. COLLECTOR

Wilfred W. Lufkin of Essex was today reappointed collector of customs for the port of Boston under orders issued by President Coolidge.

Announcement of Mr. Lufkin's retention of the post for a second term ended political speculation as to the possibilities of a successor being named. Mr. Lufkin's term ended last July 1. He retained his post since that time, however, while waiting official word from the White House.

Mr. Lufkin has the honor of being the youngest man ever named to

COMRADES PAY TRIBUTE TO FIRST SUB VICTIMS BROUGHT TO SURFACE

Washing about in the interior of the sunken submarine S-51, the bodies of two men, the first of the thirty-three victims to be discovered, were found today beneath the waters of Block Island Sound.

Brought to the surface by divers, they were identified as those of John L. Gibson, engineman, second class, of Amity, Oregon, and William C. Teschemacher of Bangor, Pa., seaman, first class.

As the blanket-wrapped forms were lifted aboard the flagship Camden, the clear notes of a bugle wafted over the waste of waters sounding taps, while the crew stood at attention, uncovered, in solemn tribute.

With the discovery of the bodies went crashing into the dust the last hope of naval officers and men that some at least of the entrapped crew were still alive.

Water inside the battery room, where the corpse of Gibson was floating, it was conceded, sealed the doom of the other men.

Lieut. Commander H. A. Flanigan, executive officer of the submarine base at New London, whose optimism has been a tower of strength to the bereaved, was one of the few who clung grimly to the hope of life aboard.

RUMOR PROVES FALSE.

For a time a wild rumor was given credence that the S-51 had been raised and all life on board found to be extinct.

The Associated Press announced the Independent Wireless Telegraph Company received a radio message

TROY'S BAIL $70,000; TRIAL IN OCTOBER

Arraigned on a series of indictments charging grand larceny and attack, John F. Troy, alleged leader of the Worcester auto thugs, arrested in Boston, was today held in Superior Criminal Court, Worcester, in default of $70,000 bail.

Troy pleaded not guilty to all counts. His trial will be in October.

With Troy today was Dennis J. Britt, said by police to be involved in some of the holdups in Worcester last month. Britt also was arraigned on the same charges. He followed Troy's steps and pleaded not guilty.

ing number plates issued to a Chelsea man for a small machine.

But before they fled in their car, driven by a fourth man, the bold thugs fired four shots at William C. Prouty, 69, watchman employed by the baking company, who raced out of the plant when the pistols barked and sent two slugs after the fleeing men.

Prouty, escaped the rain of bullets, but two of the shots narrowly missed George Hazlett, driver for the Ward company, and Irving Lazarus, employed by the T. H. Snyder Preserve Company, opposite the Ward plant.

These two men, with Prouty, made desperate efforts to overtake the running thugs before they leaped into their machine, parked with motor running, 100 feet down Albany street.

The bold robbery was carried out as a result of information conveyed to the thugs, the police believe, by someone who knew that the Central Trust Co. intended delivering the Ward payroll today instead of on Thursday or Saturday, as has been the custom for many weeks.

More than a month ago, as a result of conferences between Cambridge bankers, business men and the police, inspired by the epidemic of holdups, it was agreed, according to the police, to make all payroll and large money deliveries on Thursdays and Saturdays.

A police car, carrying four policemen trained in marksmanship and carrying riot guns as well as their usual arms, accompanied every money delivery.

The street in which delivery was being made was then roped off and no traffic was allowed to traverse the thoroughfare until the money had been placed safely away.

Today's money delivery, resulting in the holdup, was the first, the police claim, made without the police car. They assert they did not know of the bank's intention to deliver the money on a Tuesday, nor from their investigation, were any but bank and the Ward company officials supposed to be aware of the delivery.

Attention was drawn by the police to the fact that the car used in transporting the payroll from the Central Trust Co. to the baking plant, was neither armored nor grilled to guard against thugs.

The car was an ordinary type, stock sedan of a popular four-cylinder make.

The Central Trust Company car, with Ross driving and with Johnson and O'Toole inside, halted in front of the baking plant as a big touring car rolled up, coming through Albany street from the opposite direction.

One hundred feet beyond, and on the other side of the street, the thugs' car slid to a stop, in front of the Reid-Murdoch Company plant.

Three men jumped from the car while a fourth sat behind the wheel. The motor was allowed to idle.

Twenty minutes before, T. A. Snyder, employed by the Reid-Murdoch Co., had seen the car with the four men, standing near a gas-filling station at Albany street and Massachusetts avenue, and he was watching when it slid to the curb.

The three men who had alighted walked rapidly back toward the bank car. One thug quickened his pace, passed the car, wheeled and fired a shot point blank through the wind shield.

A second thug fired into the rear of the car and a third fired through the side. One of these bullets wounded Johnson, the messenger, in the head.

According to witnesses, the bag containing the payroll came flying out of the bank car.

One thug, who fired his pistol with his left hand, stooped and snatched up the bag with his right.

Then, as Prouty, Hazlett and Lazarus came flying out into the street, the thug trio fled back toward their machine.

"Get them," cried Prouty, firing two shots, but the left-handed bandit, still racing with he bag, turned and sent four slugs back at the pursuers.

Then they were in the big touring car, the machine roared away, gears clashed and the car whirled from Albany street into Erie—and was gone.

The only description secured by the police was one of the left-handed thug. He wore blue overalls, a light cap and a brown coat sweater, buttoned high about his neck. Prouty declared he could identify this man's face under any circumstances, should he be caught.

Young Ross entered the employ of the bank six months ago. He was born in Watertown, was a graduate of Watertown High School and took the position as chauffeur after he had completed a two-year course at Massachusetts Agricultural College.

He had been living with his father, William F. Ross, retired head of the William F. Ross Company, furniture manufacturers, whose offices are at 201 Bridge street, East Cambridge. Besides his father he is survived by a brother, Herbert, and four stepbrothers, T. S. Ross, No. 48 Hillside road, Watertown; George M. Ross of Lexington, Robert Ross of Belmont, and William F. Ross of Portland, Oregon.

First Slaying in Series of Cambridge Holdups

Murder was added today to the long list of holdups which for the past three years have terrorized Cambridge.

Payrolls amounting to thousands of dollars have been stolen with little or no police interference.

Until the murder of the Central Trust Company messenger today the bandits had avoided actual killing. The slaying of Edward Ross will, it is said, mark a determined drive to expel all thugs from the community.

A partial list of some of the bigger robberies which have taken place in Cambridge within the past three years follows:

May 24, 1922—Joseph Crowley, bookkeeper for Morse & Whyte Company, robbed of a $750 payroll near the firm's factory.

May 31, 1923—Fred McCausland, a messenger of the Manufacturers' National Bank of Kendall square, Cambridge, robbed of $3,173 a short distance from the bank doors.

March 25, 1924—Rufus A. Johnson, messenger of the Central Trust Company, robbed of $2,000 in Albany street, not far from the scene of today's outrage.

February 28, 1925—Office of the American Optical Company at No. 50 Broadway, East Cambridge, raided and $1,952 payroll was stolen.

MITCHELL PUTS HIS CHARGES UP TO COURT

long as aircraft are in existence. They can put out of commission any naval surface vessel more effectively and economically than any other unit," he declared.

The "destructive" paper, he declared, dealt with the administration of the army and navy air services. Chirman Morrow informed him he was free to proceed as he chose.

The other eight papers discussed the coast defense; sea craft, the air force personnel, civil and commercial aviation, the effect of air power on world armaments, air administration of other world powers and a plan to remedy defects in the American air organization.

For exterior enemies, Colonel Mitchell said, "we must look across the Atlantic and Pacific," adding that although there was no reason to expect hostile relations with the English it must be considered in drafting defence plans.

BRITAIN HOLDS POWER.

Declaring Great Britain's force of 1,000 airplanes could be landed in Nova Scotia in from eight to ten days, he said American cities could then be reached in about three hours.

Dirigible airships for carrying airplanes, he asserted, can be built that will fly from Europe to the United States and return.

For the Atlatnic, he said, we need an army to protect the land, a navy equipped with submarines, but above all, an air force to protect the nation from attack by air.

"In considering our east coast defense plans" he continued, "we must think of England as dominating the Atlantic and as strog in the Caribbean."

Turning to the Pacific, he asserted it was the desire of Japan to control all entrances to Asia, and the point of attack from the Pacific is by way of Alaska, not Honolulu, the capture of which would expose a hostile fleet to an open attack from the submarine and airplane.

Colonel Mitchell said if the United States is attacked from both the Atlantic and the Pacific an air force would be far more mobile to shift to the centre of attack.

The proposal to develop the air defence, he asserted, does not entail larger appropriations, but a redirection of present expenditures.

AIR SERVICE INADEUATE.

"Other nations," he said, "are aware of thesQe matters, while we bury our heads in the sand like an ostrich."

"The navy's mission," he continued, "is at sea, it would be pushed to sea, to keep open the lanes of communication.

"Our army has a system complicated in the extreme. It sticks and clings to systems of bygone times as all armies do. It will work if properly applied."

The army air service, he declared, is [illegible] adequate to meet an emergency, and many changes should be made in the army organization, including the establishment of a separate artillery corps.

Present equipment of the air service was described as of an antiquated type, in deplorable condition.

"We have no air service," he asserted, "that is, in both equipment and personnel. The complement consists of about twelve old, worn-out pursuit planes and twenty-two old bombers, and all the rest are D. H.-4 Liberty engine planes, which are old, worn out and dangerous to fly."

The ranking Army officers regard the Air Service as an auxiliary, he continued, while the Navy looks upon the Air Service as an activity for its own protection.

GENERAL STAFF "IGNORANT"

Enumerating many handicaps which, he said, had been placed upon aviation, he declared it was of "little wonder" that flying officers desired taking air development from the General Staff.

"There has been no team work between the Army and the Air Service," he continued, "and usually the inexperienced Army commander damned the airman and his plane."

The lack of team work, he continued, was due to the "utter ignorance of the General Staff of 90 per cent. of the Air Service problems."

"Is it any wonder," he added, "that after seventeen years of trials and tribulations air service officers are united behind their chief in urging for transfer of the air service into a separate corps;

"If we had had an aircraft industry at the opening of the war," Colonel Foulois said, "we would have been spared many trials and we hope we will never have them again."

The present duties at Mitchell Field, he described as chiefly the "entertainment of the New York populace." The real war-time duty was to "care for the defense of the metropolis."

The flying men believe, Colonel Mitchell said, that with proper development of the air system a hostile army could never set foot on America.

before it is heard," Colonell said, adding that all army and navy officers

"The voice of the air is smothered are not qualified to present the needs of aviation to Congress or the pople.

FAVORS PATRICK PLAN.

In the navy, he continued, the basic idea is the battleship and not aviation, which is driving the battleship from the ocean.

Of the officers comig out of the military and naval academies, he said, not more than 35 per cent. are capable of flying an airplane. Ground men, sea men and air men, he said, should be allowed to figure ou their own problems and "not choked off, bulldozed and held off like a stepchild."

Colonel Mitchell advocated creation of a department of national defense, a proposal favored by Major General Mason M. Patrick, army air chie, as an ultimate goal to be attained. In this proposed establishment, the colonel said, there need be little change in the present army and navy organization, as the function of the air forces is to fight in the air; and if such a department is not set up there should be a unification of all air forces.

He advocated a department of aeronautics, headed by a secretary and an assistant secretary of air, with three principal divisions, military aviation, division of fabrication, civil and commercial aviation.

TROY HELD IN $70,000 BAIL FOR TRIAL

Bail was set at $70,000. Britt was arrested in Newark September 18. Neither man had counsel in court.

Troy was arrested by Boston inspectors while he was preparing to give himself up to the authorities. He said he was afraid the Worcester police would not treat him fairly.

When Troy was taken to Worcester from Boston police headquarters, he insisted on two men from the office of his counsel, Attorney William R. Scharton, accompany him. These men were with him when Inspectors Dorsey and Augusta made the arrest at gunpoint in Auburndale.

Troy's car, bearing the fugitive and the two legal representatives, was parked beside a filling station when the inspectors leaped to the running board with drawn guns.

Troy only was arrested.

He was taken to Boston police headquarters, booked as a suspicious person, photographed, finger-printed and measured. The Worcester police were notified, and late in the evening took him into custody and back to that city.

When Troy was searched by Inspector John A. Dorsey, the photograph of a girl was found in his pocket, which he declared was his sweetheart. He refused to give her name and the Worcester police were unable to identify her.

Troy's capture was due to information the Boston police had received that he had arranged to meet Attorney William R. Scharton, Boston lawyer, and surrender himself.

Fear that the Worcester police would have handled him brutally was the reason he gave for preferring his capture to go to the credit of the Boston police rather than to the police of his home city.

"I haven't left Worcester since the police began looking for me until today," declared Troy.

He steadfastly maintained that several days before the reign of terror in Worcester, which started Aug. 9, of which he has been credited as being the leading spirit, he left Worcester and was in a hospital undergoing an operation for ulcers, but he refused to tell where the hospital was located.

He said he did not return to Worcester until August 19 and took no part in the crimes of which he is accused. He says that he was concealed in his father's house on the day of his return, when it was searched by the police and that the officers passed within an arm's length of him.

He denies that he visited Derosier's home on the night of his death or attended the services at the cemetery.

His mother and father, harrassed by fears that he would be shot on sight by the police if they caught him, were responsible for persuading Troy to surrender himself, he told the local police.

Not only had he remained at all times in Worcester but he had visited his parents on several occasions, he said.

sands, he bribed the authorities after he landed in jail. He stayed in jail as much or as little as he pleased. The young bootlegger, who had made over a million, protested that they "tapped him" rather severely.

WHEN IT was suggested that an official higher up might go to jail for bribe-taking, that official asked: "What jail do you think you could send me to that's on the level?" He intimated plainly that the bootleg business had corrupted officials wholesale, and that with money you could buy what you wanted.

There is no doubt that the "easy money" of bootlegging, hijacking and drug selling has seriously damaged public safety and weakened the value of officials.

WHO'S GREATER HUB'S SWEETHEART?

HUB'S MOST BEAUTIFUL SOUGHT

Girls Must Rush Photos So "Directorette" for Metropolitan Can Be Picked

Who is the most beautiful girl in Greater Boston? Who is Greater Boston's sweetheart?

A $500 prize is offered by the Boston Evening American, and a permanent position as "directorette" in the magnificent, new Metropolitan Theatre awaits her.

She may be bobbed, or wear her hair in the old-fashioned way. She may be a blond, or a brunette. There are no restrictions other than that she must be unwed.

To define beauty is impossible. Experts and artists have disagreed on the subject. A woman need not have a baby stare to be beautiful. There is a certain something—a charm—a magnetism that makes some women more beautiful than others. So let every young woman of Greater Boston enter this contest.

What is a "Directorette?" And what are to be her duties? Nothing more than to occupy a place of prominence in the grand foyer of the beautiful Metropolitan Theatre. She will be gorgeously gowned by an expert costumer.

The Metropolitan Theatre is to be one of Boston's proudest possessions. It is rapidly nearing completion at Tremont and Hollis streets.

Come on, girls! Who is the most beautiful girl in Greater Boston to grace this magnificent edifice? Who is Greater Boston's sweetheart?

Send in your photographs immediately to the Sweetheart Contest Editor of the Boston Evening American. The contest lasts only a fortnight.

SURE FATHER OF FAMILY LIVES

Mrs. James and her son, Ben Franklin James, whose father and husband, chief motor machinist's mate, Frank P. James, is on the stricken S-51. Though this is the third submarine mishap he has been in, they refuse to abandon hope that he still lives.

KEEP HOPE ALIVE THEIR MEN'LL COME BACK

By MAXINE McBRIDE

While a Nation awaits with mingled dread and hope the word of the fate of those pent within the steel walls that gird the S-51, there is a smaller group in New London to whom the news means everything in life.

This pathetic handful is made up of the parents, the wives, the children, the lovers of the martyrs to duty who went down in the sea.

The telephone, which jangled incessantly on Lieutenant-Commander Flanigan's desk at the naval submarine base in New London today, brought forth the same response over and over again: "No word as yet. It is a battle against the elements. We are standing by for the weather to clear. You will hear as soon as we hear—everything is being done that can be done."

HIS THIRD TIME.

At the pretty cottage home of Mrs. Mary James, wife of Frank Pierce James, chief motor machinist's mate, aboard the S-51 a ceaseless vigil is kept with her little lad, "Benny" Franklin James, six years old, who prayerfully await the tidings from the sea.

Twice before has Chief Mate James escaped the perilous encounters on the seas. He was a member of the L-5 when she was sunk during the war, and lived through a three-day imprisonment on the bottom of the sea. Again he shipped aboard the G-1, which sunk off League Island, and he outlived a two-day stay in the caged chambers of the sub before he was rescued.

For pretty Margaret Sheehan, wife of John L. Sheehan, who lives atop a hill overlooking the sea at No. 125 Thames street, Groton, Ct., hope, too, reigns eternal.

HAD STRANGE DREAMS.

It has only been a year since she married sailor Jack, motor machinist's mate and a Groton boy from birth.

By her side are Jack's sister, Mrs. Helen Chappell, and his mother, and brother, James.

At No. 18 Lewis street, three sailormen's wives dwell together, Mrs. Rosa Lawton, wife of William Lawton, engineer aboard the S-51; Mrs. Paul Berk, wife of Paul Berk, S-51 engine man; and Mrs. Alfred Gier, wife of Alfred Gier, one of the three survivors of the sunken submarine.

"I've cried my eyes almost out," Mrs. Lawton smiled bravely today. "And I'm bound I'm going to keeup up, if just for Bill. He would want me to. He told me if anything happened to have faith to the last, and I will have."

It has only been a five months' time since young Mrs. Paul Berk came from inland parts of Pennsylvania to live by the sea near her husband, Paul Berk, engineman of the S-51.

WOKE IN NIGHT.

"I woke up in the middle of the night and shivered," she said. "With every stroke of the clock I felt something dreadful had happened. I couldn't sleep a wink all night, and at four o'clock in the morning when I received the telegram from Washington, I knew beforehand what it was going to say."

For the third member of the trio, Mrs. Alfred Gier, only relief and tearful joy abound. She is "the fortunate girl who has gone to Boston to meet her husband, all safe and sound" to the other two saddened women. But her joy is theirs, and their grief and pity they pass on in turn to the other tragedy-ridden families of the lost crew.

GIRL LOSES LIFE AS CANOE UPSETS

Mrs. Helen Mann, who with a man said to have been Hugh Johanson, was drowned early today in Dudley Pond, Cochituate. Another couple, with them, escaped.

A girl and man were drowned and another couple were rescued by campers in dories early today when their canoes overturned in Dudley Pond, Cochituate.

The dead are Mrs. Helen Mann, a restaurant cashier in Boston and a resident of Cummings road, Bedford, and a man said by the police to have been Hugh Johanson, although relatives believe the name is wrong.

Those saved were Miss Anna Lawson of No. 66 Long street, Roxbury, and a male companion known to casual acquaintances only as "Rebel." He disappeared into the woods after the rescue, while the girl was taken to Framingham Hospital.

At the home of Mrs. Johanson, Mrs. Mann's mother, it was stated she was the wife of H. I. Mann, an employe at the Portsmouth Navy Yard, and the mother of a four-year-old son. Her family knew the Lawson girl, but neither of the men.

The first known of the accident was when campers heard the screams of the quartet when they were thrown into the water. Several campers put out in dories and rescue was accomplished after much difficulty.

NEW HAVEN IN FIGHT ON SUIT

The New Haven Railroad in a further effort toward rehabilitation has filed a petition in United States District Court for Southern New York asking for a modification of the decree in the Federal suit which, in October, 1914, placed in the hands of trustees the Connecticut and Rhode Island trolleys and its investment in the Boston & Maine Railroad.

The decree also directed the sale of the New Haven's interests in the Eastern Steamship Corporation and the stock in the New York and Western Massachusetts trolleys and the notes of the New England Investment & Security Company.

The decree withheld action on other steamship lines pending the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission as to whether such lines might be held by the New Haven under the provisions of the Panama Canal Act.

CLEAR LEONARD WOOD, JR., OF WRONG IN BANKRUPTCY

New York, Sept. 29 (A.P.)—Frederick W. Clifford, appointed referee by the Federal Court in the Leonard Wood, Jr., bankruptcy case, today made public his findings, in which he recommended the granting of Wood's voluntary petition. The referee held that Wood had not been guilty of any irregularity in his affairs. Wood testified his bankruptcy was caused by the failure of a stock company theatre venture in Scranton, Pa., and attributed his failure to the desertions of his partner and leading man, whom he did not name. Wood gave his liabilities as $14,585, and his assets at $842.

LEON BOURGEOIS IS DEAD IN FRANCE

Paris, Sept. 29 (A.P.).—Leon Bourgeois, eminent French statesman and former premier, is dead.

Leon Victor Auguste Bourgeois, born in Paris in 1851, devoted an active life to the public service. His activities in his later years were almost exclusively devoted to the League of Nations.

MACRI RE-TRIAL LATE ON LIST

Litchfield, Ct., Sept. 29 (A.P.).—Retrial of Miss Olympia Macri of New Haven for killing John Bagnano, whom she alleged was father of her daughter, may not begin here until late in October, court officials forecast today.

Court will open October 6. It had been expected that the Macri case would be called then, but criminal and civil dockets are heavy and attorneys may oppose delay in regular order of business.

State's Attorney Alling, who represents the State in the Macri case, has indicated that he would like delay in the Macri case.

Counsel for the young woman has expressed opposition, claiming it would be an injustice to delay bringing Miss Macri to trial.

Court officers do not say when the Macri case might be taken up, but give October 20 as a tentative date.

In the firs trial the jury disagreed, eleven jurors being for acquittal. The State secured a change of venue.

FORMER MISSION HEAD'S FUNERAL TOMORROW

Rev. C. L. D. Younkin, for thirty-five years superintendent of the Boston North End Mission, retiring in 1920, died at the Massachusetts General Hospital.

Mr. Younkin was a native of Iowa and spent his early life on a farm. He was graduated from the University of Iowa and from Boston University Theological School, in 1885.

He was a member of the South Suffolk Conference of the Congregational Church.

Since his retirement, Mr. Younkin has made his home at No. 15 Addison street, Arlington. The funeral will be held at the Park street Church tomorrow at 3 P. M.

RELIABILITY PLANES ARE OFF IN OMAHA

Chicago, Sept. 29 (A.P.).—Five of the seventeen planes in the first annual airplane reliability tour, took off between 9 and 9:10 a. m. today for Omaha, with two scheduled stops enroute.

Strikers in Cars Picket Plant at Holyoke

Holyoke, Mass., Sept. 29 (I.N.S.).—Automobile pickets is the latest innovation in industrial disturbances.

The idea was introduced here today by pickets at the plant of the Holyoke Worsted Mills, who paraded around the factory in comfort instead of hiking.

The strike was called because of the company's refusal to withdraw wage decrease notice.

FLEE IN BOOZE RAID; CAUGHT

When Sergeant Frank McNabb and Patrolman Bernard Carney of the Joy Street Station announced their identity to Mrs. Mary McCarthy and Patrick Forbes after they claimed to have bought two quarts of whiskey from the pair in an apartment on the first floor at No. 403 Charles street, Forbes, jumped through an open window and Mrs. McCarthy fled to an adjoining apartment.

It was only after a chase of about six blocks that Forbes was caught. Another search was necessary before Mrs. McCarthy was found.

YOUNG LA FOLLETTE IN ELECTION BATTLE TODAY

Milwaukee, Sept. 29 (A.P.).—Votes cast in a State-wide election today will decide whether Robert M. La Follette, Jr., is to succeed his father as United States Senator or whether one of the other four candidates will be elevated to this position. The others are: Edward F. Dithmar, William George Bruce, John M. Work and George Bauman. La Follette is the Republican nominee, but has announced himself as endorsing the platform of the La Follette-Wheeler party in 1924. He has attacked the Coolidge administration.

MISS RAMBEAU'S ROOM RAIDED

New York, Sept. 29.—For the second time in less than twelve months Marjorie Rambeau, a former wife of Willard Mack, has been accused of stealing another wife's husband.

When Mrs. Mabel Manton, a young English wife, named Miss Rambeau in a divorce action filed in Supreme Court against her actor-husband, Kevitt Manton, she also sued the actress for $100,000 alienation damages.

Last November, Blanche Yurka, actress, named Miss Rambeau in her divorce suit against Ian Keith, her husband, a vaudeville actor.

Mrs. Manton, according to affidavits filed, bases her suit against Miss Rambeau on a raid made with private detectives upon the actress' suite in the Endicott Hotel at 3 o'clock on the morning of August 29.

There she found Miss Rambeau, clad in a flimsy, lace, be-ribboned creation, with Manton, according to the affidavit.

"Let us be friendly," was Miss Rambeau's greeting to Mrs. Manton as the intruders entered, according to Mrs. Manton, "won't you shake hands?"

Manton, on the other hand, was visibly embarrassed and did not speak during the meeting, she relates.

When he attempted to explain his position the next day, Mrs. Manton showed her husband a telegram she declared she had found in his trunk. It read:

"Darling, I love you. Nothing can keep us apart but the Harlem, as the old conniver says. Don't be carnivorous. Your pal in crime.

"MARJORIE RAMBEAU."

Lynn Jews Seek $5,000

The Associated Jewish Charities of Lynn began the Jewish New Year with a drive for $5,000 to enable the organization to carry on its work in aid of needy families and orphans. The drive this week will be confined almost wholly to the business and professional men and women of the city, and beginning next week a committee of more than 150 workers will canvass the homes of the community.

FIRST BODIES RECOVERED FROM LOST SUB

Naval officers at Newport declared the feat to have been impossible as the two giant cranes Monarch and Century were tied up at that port at the time.

Lieut. Commander Flanigan also stated he did not believe it possible.

"In the first place, we'd have a message and we haven't any," he said. "In the second place, it's virtually a physical impossibility. The two wrecking ships have gone back to Newport and they would not have had time to return to the scene.

CALLS FEAT IMPOSSIBLE.

"In the third place, about two hours ago divers were below aking out a man's body. It takes the divers an hour and a half to come to the surface and they could not lift the submarine while the divers were below. That would leave them only half an hour to raise the ship. It couldn't be done."

The first body brought up from the depths was that of Gibson, which had been found by Diver William Reed in the battery room of the submarine.

Read, undeterred by a boisterous sea which drove the cranes to cover, went down shortly after sunrise, and managed to remove the hatch of the battery room.

Making his way inside, while leaping waves far above swayed his life and air lines, he came upon the body and had it lifted to the surface.

It was in a good state of preservation, and word of its recovery was immediately broadcasted by wireless. The dead man enlisted on September 17, 1924, and gave his age at that time as twenty-five years. His wife resides at No. 25 Spicer avenue, New London.

HONORED BY COMRADES.

The body was first taken aboard the U. S. S. Camden, flagship of Rear Admiral H. H. Christy, where the flag was lowered to half mast while the bugler blew taps and the crew stood at attention.

More than two hours later the body of Teschemacher, only nineteen years old, was found by two other divers, and joined its companion on the dack of the flagship.

News of this was also flashed, and then, tenderly and reverently, the still forms were transferred to the destroyer Mahon and taken to the Naval Hospital at Newport. Accompanying them were death certificates issued by the Naval Board of Inquiry.

Because of the continued high seas, it was found at daybreak that the giant cranes Monarch and Century could not resume operations interrupted yesterday, when they started to lift the stern of the submarine.

As a matter of fact, it was said that the Monarch, the 200-ton crane, was itself disabled by a hole torn in the bow when the lighter collided with a tug.

The divers, however, who had worked until eleven o'clock last night in relays, were on the scene early.

The Camden, with Rear Admiral Christy, commander of the control forces, still aboard, was tossing to her cables in the heavy seas, while the smaller boats of the divers were flung wildly about.

Despite the danger of venturing beneath the surface under the conditions, Diver Read donned his armor, and was carefully lowered to the bottom.

While attendants anxiously paid out the life and airlines, the diver made his perilous way to the stranded submarine, 127 feet below.

Once arrived at the bottom, he managed, despite the tossing of his lines, to open the hatch of the battery room. There, floating in the water which filled the compartment, was a body.

Read signalled to his companions above, and making fast a line about the corpse, it was drawn to the surface and lifted aboard the Camden.

As willing hands reached down to grasp all that was mortal of the S-51 hero, the ship's flag was lowered to half staff and the remainder of the crew stood to attention, uncovered.

The first message wirelessed from the Camden was fragmentary, but was supplemented a few minutes later by another which gave more details, including the statement that the body was in good condition.

Some two hours later, two more divers descended to the bottom, and while one entered the sunken craft through the conning tower and worked forward toward the battery compartment, the other busied himself outside.

It was expected that other bodies would be recovered from time to time as the divers continued their investigations.

Commander Flanigan said that Admiral Christy undoubtedly was delaying further word on the victims until certain of his facts.

SEEKING MORE BODIES.

"This probably will continue all day," he declared. "There are other bodies, we concede, to be brought to the surface and now that the divers seem to have free access to the hulk, developments are likely to follow rapidly."

In the meantime Lieutenant-Commander Scanlan had departed on his mission of condolence to the widow, accompanied by Mrs. Scanlan and Dr. Jones, a local physician, who has been acting as intermediary between the stricken families and the New London base.

It also developed that Lieutenant-Commander Scanlan had called at every local home of the victims twice daily to see that all was well.

No one was able to predict when the lighters would be able to resume the work of salvaging the hull of the submarine.

The sudden blowing up of half a gale, which kicked up a heavy sea, came as a surprise, as early indications promised moderate winds and smooth water.

HAMPERED BY GALE.

It was hoped that the wind might die down some time this afternoon, but atmospheric conditions over the Sound are unstable at this season and coastal experts would venture no predictions.

Later a radio message was received from a Boston Evening American reporter on board the Camden, who stated that the divers had gagged the salvage air line in the wrecked battery compartment to prevent the escape of air being pumped into other compartments.

The tragic news was received with the calmness of despair by Mrs. Gibson, according to Lieutenant-Commander Scanlan.

"She seemed to be braced for the ordeal," he said, "and when she saw me coming, I think she knew that my news was not of the best.

CITY VOTES SYMPATHY.

"At that, I believe the news, in some cases, might come with something like relief after the long suspense. The families have been able to view both possibilities—the finding of the body dead or alive, and therefore the shock after three days may be lessened by preparedness."

At the meeting of the New London City Council a resolution offered by Councilor Fox was unanimously adopted expressing the sympathy of the citizens of the city and the hope that Providence might yet preserve the lives of those who were in the submarine.

Navy Is Taking Needless Risks, Says Coolidge

Washington, Sept. 29 (A.P.).—President Coolidge is of the opinion that recent disasters do not indicate a lack of efficiency or morale in the navy, but his off-hand opinion is that peacetime mishaps show an indication on the part of the navy to take greater risks in development and experimental work than perhaps is necessary at the time.

ONLY TITLE NOW HELD BY BISHOP LAWRENCE

Though he still retains his title Bishop Lawrence has yielded all his power to his coadjutor, Bishop Slattery.

This is a surprise, not only to the outside world but even to Episcopal ministers within the State. They knew that the venerable bishop had ceded his administration authority to Bishop Slattery, but the fact that he had also yielded his ecclesiastical authority came as a decidedly surprising step.

The fact that Bishop Lawrence had virtually retired became known when the convention journal appeared bearing an except, entitled, "A Letter of Cession."

Those closest to the Bishop are surprised that he has even given up his superintendence of candidates for holy orders, a department that was particularly close to his heart.

INCREASE HITS COMMUTERS

Trolley commuters who use the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway will find that fares have gone up when they hop their cars on Thursday next.

The increase is due to the wage hike granted the employes of the road. The 10-cent single cash fare will remain the same, the increase taking the form of fewer rides on the dollar ticket.

Most of the districts will be affected to the extent that they will lose one ride in each dollar.

On the Scollay Square-Chelsea line the patrons will now receive an eight-ride ticket for 50 cents instead of a ten-ride ticket.

In Brockton the fifteen rides for a dollar will be cut to fourteen rides, and the seventeen rides for a dollar on inner zone tickets will be cut to sixteen rides.

On the Fall River division the twenty rides for a dollar ticket will be cut to nineteen rides, while on the Lowell division the rule will be fifteen rides for a dollar instead of sixteen.

ESCAPED TWO SUBMARINE DISASTERS

Boston Man Tells of Heroism He Says Must Have Prevailed on the S-51

The terrible sensations that members of the crew of the ill-fated S-51 experienced when the submarine took a 126 foot plunge to the bottom of Long Island Sound, was described today by J. C. Coleman, only veteran in Boston of two submarine disasters.

With 30 officers and men Coleman escaped death in the R-27 when that sub took a 315-foot "crash drive" in Panama waters last year. How the crew were tossed into the nose of the falling submarine, each fearing the death that overtook members of the S-51 crew, is vividly told by Coleman, gunner's mate on the U. S. S. Florida.

"I know how those men must have suffered after the S-51 was rammed and sunk to the botom," he said. "I believe each anticipated the end, for every man who follows the sea knows the slim chance of ever rising to the surface in a wrecked sub.

IN 315-FOOT PLUNGE.

"I was aboard the R-27 when she took that 300-foot plunge and the L-7 when her boiler exploded on the West Coast. Few of us held little hope of being saved following either disaster.

"The R-27 plunged nearly to the bottom of Colon waters when in some mysterious way, owing to salt and fresh water currents, the officers lost command of the vessel. Our sub took a sudden nose dive, pitching us all about towards the front part of the ship. The speed with which she descended nearly took our breah away. Officers stood at the depth gauges and watched while the read fifty and 100 feet below the surface.

When the gauges showed 200 and then 300 feet we knew the end had come. No one showed fear or excitement, even though our hearts told us we were done for. Courage and calmness prevailed just as I am sure it did in the S51. Men on submarines have been through so many hardships they soon acquire courage.

"When the sub reached a depth of 315 feet she was got under control. We remained submerged only a short time and each of us was thankful when we came to the top and saw the sky above our heads once more."

TERROR OF CHLORINE.

Chlorine gas, feared by every sub man when the salt water comes in contact with the powerful batteries, was described by Coleman as experienced during the explosion of the L7. He said:

"Immediately after the explosion deadly fumes spread about the engine room. Forgetting their own fears men rushed to the aid of their buddies who were badly burned. As in the case of the R-27 not a man lost his head or forgot his duties.

"There is always danger aboard a submarine yet the life aboard one always lures a sailor back. Having sailed on a sub no other vessel or battleship will ever hold a man for long. I have seen service on submarines for seven years. I have been transferred for a few months to shore duty, but I am waiting for the day when I will get back on a submarine again."

ARREST 4 PLOTTERS IN PORTUGUESE REVOLT

Lisbon, Sept. 29 (A.P.)—Warned by the French police that foreign agitators had proceeded from France to Portugal on a revolutionary mission, the Portuguese authorities have uncovered in Lisbon a revolutionary concentration centre and have arrested four leaders. Other arrests are expected to follow, and the government is taking prompt measures to expel all alien suspects.

EMPLOYE HELD IN REDMOND BANKRUPTCY

William F. Parks Accused of Concealing Assets Sought by the Trustees

William F. Parks, an employe of the bankrupt G. F. Redmond & Co., Inc., was arraigned before United States Commissioner Jenney in Federal Court today charged with receiving assets of the company, whiih should have been turned over to the trustees for benefit of creditors. He pleaded not guilty.

After a conference with Judge James M. Morton, senior district judge, Commissioner Jenney held Parks for the Grand Jury in $25,000 bail.

Bartholomew A. Brickley, Charles F. Curtis, Jr., and J. Weston Allen, Redmond trustees in bankruptcy, have repeatedly declared that large sums that were in the possession of the bankrupt company are being concealed.

Referee Arthur Black of the Bankruptcy Court recently handed down a decision stating that James S. Lamont, Redmond's business aid, was concealing assets running into six figures and ordered their deliverance to the trustees.

Redmond is under a sentence of ten years in Federal prison, Atlanta. His counsel is attempting to get the case before the Supreme Court at Washington. If he fails Redmond will be remanded for sentence.

Letters Like This Prove the Reliability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Turtle Lake, Wisconsin.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for weakness, backache and nervouness. I had these troubles for years and had taken other medicines for them, but I have found no medicine so good as the Vegetable Compound and I recommend it to my friends who have troubles similar to mine. I saw it advertised and thought I would try it and it has helped me in all my troubles. I have had six children and I have taken the Lydia E. Pinkham Vegetable Compound before each one was born, for weakness, vomiting, poor appetite and backache, and again after childbirth because of dizzy headaches. It is a good medicine for it always helps me. I have also taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills for the last eight years for constipation."—Mrs. Mabel La Point, R. F. D. No. 1, Turtle Lake, Wisconsin.

For sale by druggists everywhere. A recent canvass reports 98 out of every 100 women benefited by LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

First Senior Supper Dance Will Be Held December 4

Six in All Scheduled at Copley-Plaza Ballroom, Continuing Until Mid-March

Betty Alden

THAT SMART DANCING CLIQUE OF Boston's aristocracy, the Senior Supper Dance set, has choice dates down on the Winter's brilliant calendar for their dances at the Copley-Plaza. Ronald T. Lyman, this year, as heretofore, mentor of the Senior dances, has taken six Fridays for them, commencing December 4 and stretching into mid-March.

DECEMBER HAS TWO Senior Supper Dances, the 4th and 18th. January includes one, on the 15th. February shines with two, on the 5th and 19th, and the last is on March 12. Last season the guest list was revised somewhat, new names were included, notably those young brides.

MISS BETTY THORNDIKE, down from the Berkshire place, flits about town intent on wedding plans for her mid-November ceremonial, a large church affair with an equally large reception at the Thorndike town house in Commonwealth avenue. The Alden A. Thorndikes, the bride-elect's parents, announced her betrothal to John P. Duncan some months ago.

MISS THORNDIKE, much feted in her first Winter, came out at a large ball at the Somerset Hotel, preceded by a large dinner. She's a modish young woman, chic to her fingertips, and with brilliant dark coloring promises a feast to the eye in her bridal robes. Mr. Duncan is a Harvard man, belongs to the exclusive clubs, and to the Newport Summer set.

MRS. LARZ ANDERSON is back at Weld, her large estate in Jamaica Plain, for a short Autumn stay before she and Mr. Anderson move on to Washington, as is their usual mid-Winter custom. The Anderson home in Massachusetts avenue, in our "Great Village Capital" is the scene of much brilliant entertaining during the season.

THE ANDERSONS HAVE been on a long foreign journey, rather an arduous one but full of thrills and adventure through the deserts of Northern Africa. Mrs. Anderson, coming back to these shores, was for a while at Contoocook, N. H., where she enjoyed the simple life.

MISS MARY HALL, daughter of the R. Linzee Halls of Forest street, Medford, one of next Saturday's brides. She marries Philip Hunter Robb in Grace Church, Medford.

MRS. OLIVER AMES, JR., goes over to the Adirondacks for a week or two, as member of a merry house party, before taking up the various philanthropic activities engaging her versatile talents this Winter. One of the first on the program, to which she lends her gracious presence, goes forward soon under Salvation Army banners.

AND SPEAKING of society's more serious endeavors — philanthropic and educational—the effort to establish the Lowthorpe Endowment goes steadily forward. Mrs. Stephen B. Davol of "The Hill Top" in West Rindge, New Hampshire, leader in the Lowthorpe movement and vitally interested in the Landscape School out in Groton, soon comes into town to establish headquarters for the Winter.

SHENANDOAH WAS KEPT ON FATAL COURSE

Lakehurst, N. J., Sept. 29 (A.P.).—Mrs. Margaret Ross Lansdowne, widow of Commander Zachary Lansdowne, of the Shenandoah, accepted today the invitation of the naval court of inquiry to make a statement.

It may be that she will not be heard here but in Washington if it finally is decided to transfer the inquiry to that city. Mrs. Lansdowne is now in Washington.

Lakehurst, N. J., Sept. 29 (I.N.S.).—That a different course from that taken by Commander gachary Lansdowne "possibly" would have saved the dirigible Shenandoah from her fatal crash as twestified to today by Lieutenant Joseph B. Anderson, aerologist officer aboard the airship, before the naval court of inauiry investigating the disaster.

Lieutenant Anderson said he had advised Commander Lansdowne to take a southerly course when first indications of the storm appeared, but the commander continued to fly due west.

It was a "cyclonic" storm that broke the big dirigible in two, according to Anderson, telling his story as "weather officer" aboard the Shenandoah.

"I noticed a few flashes of lightning directly north," Anderson said. "I told Captain Lansdowne I thought we should turn south, although there was nothing in the sky directly overhead. The captain and I discussed the situation, but as neither could see any immediate danger he decided that he would continue prescribed course and would do so until some definite danger threatened us."

Mrs. Margaret Ross Lansdowne, widow of the commander of the dirigible Shenandoah, today sent word to the naval court of inquiry investigating the disaster that she would testify before the board. Mrs. Lansdowne said she would prefer to take the stand in Washington if the court intended to remove to the capital as reported.

EX-MAYOR HURLEY TO LEAD SALEM FIREMEN

Hale and hearty at eighty-one, and looking as young as ever, Hon. John F. Hurley, Salem's famous silk-hatted ex-Mayor who electrified his friends less than a year ago when he married again in Hampton, Va., is on his annual visit home. He still regards Salem as his real stamping ground though he's happy and contented in Virginia.

John F., as Salemites know him, is accompanied by his step-daughter. He never misses an opportunity to accompany the Salem Veteran Firemen to the muster at the Brockton Fair. Wearing his famous silk hat and massive diamond in his shirt front, ex-Mayor Hurley will, as of yore, acknowledge the plaudits of thousands who have seen him accompany the veterans at many musters.

MAINE TOWN IS MENACED BY FLAMES

Business Section of Solon Is Is Partly Wiped Out; Aid Is Called From Other Places

Solon, Me., Sept. 29 (A.P.).—Half of this town was destroyed early today when fire driven by a high wind swept one side of the main street, levelling eighteen buildings.

Lacking any fire fighting equipment beyond several ladders and a few buckets, the inhabitants were powerless to check the flames until fire engines arrived from Madison, Norridgewock and Skowhegan, fifteen miles away.

No one was injured. The damage probably will exceed $50,000.

"NEW BROOMS" COMEDY OF AMERICAN LIFE

The members of the new Somerville Theatre Players scored another triumph in Frank Craven's comedy, "New Brooms." This amusing, laugh-provoking play, with its many fine characterizations, served as an excellent medium to test the versatility and ability of the new company.

"New Brooms" is an interesting comedy of American life wherein the positions of father and son are reversed. Thomas Bates, Sr., remarkably well played by Mark Kent, is a grouchy old man because he has to give so much time to his broom business. Arthur Chatterdon could hardly be improved upon as the son.

WAR DRAMA IS OFFERED AT WILBUR

"What Price Glory" Portrays Bitterness of Men Who Served in Trenches

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

HOW much there is in modern warfare that may be transplanted to the theatre is largely a matter of imagination and faith. That tragedy may stalk back of the lines, that soldiering is a soulless, barbarous trade was made clear in "What Price Glory" at the Wilbur last evening.

With those who gaze affectionately upon our Marines as pretty soldiers of the sea, this hard spoken drama of coarse men will descend as a shock, for there was nothing sweet or beautiful or particularly kind in the picture drawn by Maxwell Anderson and Laurence Stallings. But soldiers who have lived in the trenches, who have wallowed in the filth of the advance lines, and who have tasted the full bitterness of war, tell us it is a faithful picture.

With their own first hand knowledge, the authors may be taken at face value, for one of them played his part in the great struggle and returned home minus a leg. That, in itself, bestows something of general authority for all that takes place in "What Price Glory."

GRIPPING DRAMA.

As a drama it proved gripping and sordid. There were no tender moments, unless you may consider the one occasion when the besotted, liquor laden Captain Flagg held a dying comrade in his arms. It was the only moment when this company commander was not berating his men or wrangling with his top sergeant.

Much of the language that stirred New York and aroused the ire of the national soldiery last season has been deleted. The profanity that made New York gasp was absent in last evening's performance, though the spots where it was originally placed could be detected with half an ear and a fraction of sense. Nevertheless, the play held its power as a vitalizing exposition of what goes on in regions where men are left to themselves, facing an armed foe. It was a new kind of war play—cold, hard and almost gruesome. Yet few shots could be heard and the fighting was principally in company quarters.

OLD TIME FEUD.

Two characters carried the burden of the conflict—a captain risen from the ranks and his top sergeant. Their's was a feud that blossomed in the Philippines and held fast to the front lines in France. Hard characters? Yes. But good soldiers. The captain, done by Jack Rosleigh, admired his sergeant as a soldier and despised him as a rival. And the compliment was brilliantly returned by Sergeant Quirk, played by Jack Carlyle. An excuse for close and bitter rivalry was the girl in the case, who turned out to be the only feminine relief in an unusually long cast. Leyla Georgie made the most of this unsympathetic role.

"What Price Glory" was strong drama, coarse in language and as hard as nails in its viewpoint on why the late war was fought. It was grim and tense—qualities that make plays enduring.

TABLOID GRAND OPERA A FEATURE AT LOEW'S

Mary Pickford has joined the "back-to-the-earlier-days" movement and in her picture, "Little Annie Rooney," at Loew's State, she is seen in one of those raggarmuffin roles that made her so popular with the movie fans of a decade or more ago. She has temporarily, at least, abandoned the funny furbelows of the costume drama and the golden slippers of the fairy tale.

There is comedy and drama, smiles and tears, and a pretty love story happily blended. William Haines is Joe Kelly and gives a finished performance opposite the star.

MAN-TO-MAN FIGHTS IN "THE IRON HORSE"

SPAULDING RETURNS TO THE STATE BALLROOM

The many Boston friends of Art Spaulding, former vaudevillian and for the past several years attached to the management of ballrooms, will be pleased to learn that he is once again connected with the State Theatre ballroom. This places the ballroom in the capable hands of Carle F. Stowe, as business manager, and Mr. Spaulding in charge of all regular and feature dance functions.

"THE SHOW OFF" GETS GOOD START IN BOSTON

"The Show Off," George Kelley's play that tipped New York on end all last season, got away to a good start at the New Park. The story deals with middle class folk in Philadelphia and has been held by critics to be a faithful study of everyday life in a busy community. "The Show Off" will be reviewed in Wednesday's Boston Evening American.

'AIDA' OPENS CIVIC OPERA SEASON

Boston Opera Company Soloists and Chorus Give Fine Rendition

For the first time since the passing of the Boston Opera Company, with Henry Russell at its head, a decade ago, Boston has an opera company of its own. The Boston Civic Opera Company opened a two weeks' stay at the Opera House with a performance of Verdi's "Aida," the time-honored opener for opera seasons.

The Civic Opera Company was organized by Boston people, who include many prominent in musical and social affairs.

Notable on the list of the advisory board is the name of the president, David I. Walsh. The president of the company is Clara Jacobo, who is one of the singing stars of the organization. With the exception of Madame Jacobo, who is a Massachusetts girl, and the artistic director, Alberto Baccolini, none of the members of the company has appeared in America before this season, most of them having recently come over from Italy.

Her voice is full and rich, and remarkably well-placed.

Almost as praiseworthy was the performance of Lucia Carofoli as Amneris, musically and dramatically. Antonio Marquez was cast as Radames. The other principal parts were filled not only capably, but in real artistic fashion. Without exception the voices were good.

The chorus is an all-Boston product and was trained here. Mr. Caccolini is to be commended for the spirited manner in which the opera moved. Working with a company newly organized, he managed to put on a performance which many a permanent organization might well emulate.

Tonight the company will give another of Verdi's operas, "Rigoletto."

LILLIAN WALKER HIT AT LOEW'S ORPHEUM

Lillian Walker, who won fame on the screen, and whose perfect dimples created a popularity equalled by but few players of her time, was tendered a reception at Loew's Orpheum. The large audience was noticeably pleased with her playlet entitled "Home's the Thing."

Surrounding Miss Walker was a particularly fine vaudeville bill, including Wilkens and Wilkens, in comic eccentricities.

TOM HENRY RUSTICATES IN "PINE TREE" STATE

Tom Henry, who guides the managerial destinies of the Gayety Theatre, is vacationizing. Mr. Henry, accompanied by Sam A. Scribner, executive head of the Columbia Burlesque Wheel, is off for a week's vacation at the Pine Tree State. Mr. Henry returns to his duties next Monday.

Continuing Shows

COLONIAL.—Ziegfeld Follies. Three hours of fun with W. C. Fields and Ray Dooley.

PLYMOUTH. — "The Gorilla." Shocks and laughs, with fun dominating the proceedings.

MAJESTIC.—"Rose-Marie." Just another week of the town's record breaking musical play.

HOLLIS.—George M. Cohan in "American Born." Concerning the doings of a smart Yankee in England.

No More Sick Headaches

Since she made the INDICAN TEST

"You'll never be rid of headaches by doping yourself with headache powders," this woman's doctor told her.

Then he made a test, and sure enough he found Indican present. As long as Indican is present in your system you simply will be troubled with sick headaches, sour bloated up stomach, gas, billiousness, broken out skin, loss of appetite until the Indican is removed. You may not realize you have Indican, but if you have the conditions mentioned above, it is a pretty sure sign you have. And unless you remove the cause of the Indican you may have some serious sickness such as rheumatism, neuritis, gastritis, even lung trouble or other dreaded disease. Make this test: Have a urinalysis made and if the chemist reports Indican present, start taking Carter's Little Liver Pills for a few days. Then make another test and see how all these signs mentioned above start to disappear. Carter's Little Liver Pills not only make the stomach, liver and bowels work in a fine healthy manner, but also have been found to drive the Indican out of the system.

FIGHT INDICAN WITH CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

COMEDY RUNS TRUE IN THE JEFFERSONS

Sprightly Play at the Copley Interpreted by Capable Cast

If "The Jeffersons," which made its American debut at the Copley Theatre, is a criterion of the calibre of the other new plays Mr. Clive has brought from the other side, the season at this Back Bay playhouse is rich in promise.

Comedy, sprightly and unflagging, runs true and smooth through the piece. The heavy Lancashire dialect and shrewd wit of an exceedingly crusty but likeable central character furnishes most of the merriment and, in the hands of E. E. Clive, not a line misses fire.

The irascible old Christopher Jefferson greatly suggests Grumpy in his testy tempers, his sharp conniving, his deep seated love for his family and the underlying sense of humor often found in persons of a sour exterior. But poor Jefferson would make a sorry detective or he would never permit his wife to "get the goods on him" so completely when she confronts him with his own ardent love letters on his refusal to sanction their daughter's marriage with the son of his business competitor.

One wished that Alan Mowbray had a larger share in the performance, as his characterization of the airy American inventor made him particularly engaging.

Charles Vane, a newcomer to the company, was excellent as the somewhat unethical Mosscrop.

NORA BAYES HEADLINE ON STRONG KEITH BILL

Miss Nora Bayes sure has no trouble delivering her goods at Keith's. After a repertoire of varied heart songs and "blues," "Our Own Nora" gets real chummy and between explaining her recent holdup and telling of her three "wonderful children," Nora Bayes danced. And how she strutted the Charleston.

HERE'S JUST A SAMPLE OF AN AUTO LETTER

Three Writers Are Going to Buy a High-Class Auto for Two Cents

By PACKARD BUICK ESSEX.

In the competition for the three automobiles this newspaper is about to sell for 2 cents each, to the readers who write the best three letters received on the subject, "Why I Like the Boston Evening American," I have received the following letters:

Thank you for giving me the opportunity to express my appreciation of my very good and intimate friend, the Boston Evening American. The serling qualities of the greatest Boston newspaper are so many that one is almost at a loss where to begin enumerating them.

However, I will begin with those that I think are its most prominent excellencies.

I admire and read the Boston American because I find in it the following good qualities:

Fair play to all classes.

A sense of humor that redeems it from that great fault of most papers, dullness.

Public spirit and a willingness to help all good causes, as witness its work for the poor in the holiday seasons and its many strenuous efforts on behalf of the ex-service man.

It also was a great factor in keeping us out of that sorry farce, the League of Nations (notions). For this alone the great body of the common people, who have to pay the bills for wars, should rise up and call the Boston Evening American blessed.

Its advertisements are always clean and plain and its classified advertisements time and money-savers. Its comic sections are really comical, and there is a largeness of tolerance and good nature that one feels as one of its best qualities the longer one reads it.

Wishing my good friend the Boston Evening American good luck, success and prosperity, I remain. Most cordially yours.

The above letter, one of—well, ever so many!—that have come to me, is submitted as indicative of what our friends think of us. Its printing here signifies nothing whatever in connection with the three big prizes. It was picked from one of the mail baskets, almost at random. The writer is a Roxbury woman.

To the person who writes the best letter on the subject, "WHY I like the Boston Evening American," this newspaper will sell a Packard sedan, a Buick sedan and an Essex coach, for 2 cents apiece!

Writer of the letter the judges call best will be given his or her choice of these brand new automobiles. Second car, to the writer of the "next best" letter. Remaining car, to the person whose letter is adjudged third in merit.

This competition closes at midnight on Monday next, October 5.

Send no money with your letter! "Only the winners pay." They will pay 2 cents apiece for a $2,844 Packard, a Buick worth $1,705.60, or a fully equipped Essex coach, value $12.90.

Letters must not contain more than 250 words, must be written on one side of the paper only, and must bear in the upper left-hand corner the name and address of the contestant. Mail them to "Mr. Packard Buick Essex," in care of the Boston Evening American, No. 5 Winthrop square, Boston, Mass.

NOW YOU KNOW PLANE'S MISSION

Circling over Greater Boston on twelve different nights, the airplane shown above has played its spectacular part in proclaiming that the price of the Boston Evening American is "NOW TWO CENTS." Thousands who have wondered at the sight have been at a loss to explain the reason for the flights. It is piloted by Lieut. F. C. Crowley (insert), and the announcement that the price of this newspaper has been reduced is in illuminated lettering, sometimes red, and sometimes white. People are getting to recognize the plane and its mission.

BREAK MINERS' 'TRUST,' PLEA OF HAMMOND

New York, Sept. 29 (A.P.).—A special session of the Pennsylvania Legislature to authorize miners from other districts to work in the anthracite fields in the event the idle miners and operators do not reach a working agreement by arbitration before the fuel situation becomes acute, is urged by John Hays Hammond, who was secretary of the recent Federal Coal Commission.

In an address today to the National Civic Federation he pointed out that no person may qualify in Pennsylvania as a certified miner until he has worked two years as a contract miner's helper, regardless of his other experience. Since the anthracite mines are nearly all unionized this law tends to give the United Mine Workers a virtual monopoly of mine labor, he said.

He characterized the law as "discriminatory" and "indefensible" and said it kept many competent bituminous coal miners away who would gladly accept employment in the anthracite fields.

Many of the anthracite miners now on "vacation strike" would return to work, he asserted, if guaranteed by Pennsylvania they would not be molested by persons favoring continuance of the strike. This guarantee and the repeal of the mine certification law are the first steps that will insure resumption of anthracite mining, he said.

"I do not believe the present strike is justified," he added, "for I believe that the grievances of either side could be redressed without adding to the cost of production."

Mrs. Roy Stone Dies

Lincoln, Eng., Sept. 29 (A.P.).—Mrs. Roy Stone, widow of the late General Roy Stone and mother of Lady Monson, died last night at her daughter's home, Burton Hall, after a short illness. The body will be transported to America for burial.

40 FLEE AS $200,000 FIRE SWEEPS FACTORY

Batavia, N. Y., Sept. 29 (A.P.).—The plant of the Muffets Corporation was destroyed by fire here today with an estimated loss of $200,000. About forty persons were at work in the plant when the fire started and all escaped in safety.

LYNN CATHOLIC CHARITIES DRIVE OPENS OCT. 15

Rev. John A. Sheridan, pastor of Sacred Heart Church, Lynn, and director of Lynn Catholic Charities Centre, announced last night the annual drive for funds would begin in Lynn district October 15 and terminate October 18. Assisting Fr. Sheridan is a committee of more than 200 workers and the pastors of Catholic churches in Lynn, Swampscott, Nahant, Saugus and Lynnfield. At masses in the churches next Sunday plans for the drive will be explained by the pastors and their assistants.

15,000 SCHOOL CHILDREN ARE FAIR GUESTS

Big Brockton Show Opens Today With Many New and Wonderful Features

Brockton, Sept. 29.—For 15,000 school children, this was a day of delight and wonderment. The small folks were the guests of the fair association on this opening day of the fifty-third annual Brockton Fair and they were royally entertained.

Admitted to the grounds free of charge, if they were under fourteen years of age, or even looked it, they mobbed the concession stands all day long, rode the merry-go-rounds and shot the shutes, drank pop beer and ate hot dogs.

There were special attractions for them, including some of the most ingeniously designed daylight fire works ever shown here.

Later in the day, the Fair management expected to entertain enough adults to bring the total attendance for the day up to 40,000 or 45,000.

VEGETABLE SHOE IS FEATURE.

The fair started off its brief 1925 run as if everybody present, even including the cattle entries, were prepared to take the "Go" slogan seriously.

Fred Field, president of the Brockton Fair Association, predicted the best year in history.

One of the typically original exhibits, which was ringed with people all day, was a shoe made of carrots, onions and beets. It is fifteen feet long and seven feet high.

During the day there was a Style Show that was as pretentious as the more formal affairs run in the big city ballrooms. Also there was a battle of music.

The dog show opens tomorrow, with 648 entries, and it is occasioning much speculation as it is the frist ever to be conducted in connection with the fair.

Walter Rapp was chairman of the committee for Children's Day, and he was assisted by Walter D. Leach, James P. Keith and Arthur Staff.

A good racing program began immediately after dinner and was to run until sundown.

Clothes soaked in "Soapine" last longer
Read the results of famous tests at Brown University
Exhaustive experiments with a solution of Soapine and water at the biological laboratory of Brown University proved that "Soapine really destroys germs—all kinds—even typhoid."
After 820 careful tests Dr. Z. R. Bliss also reported the further amazing fact that: Cotton fabrics soaked in Soapine actually increased in strength an average of 1.52 per cent.
Make the famous Soapine "soaking" test yourself. See in your own home how Soapine saves both work and clothes—soaks everything beautifully white and clean without hard washing.
For years Soapine has been known as the finest soap powder made—both for washing clothes and for general cleaning. Sales of Soapine already exceed a billion boxes. Yet only recently were the marvelous germ-killing and strengthening properties of Soapine discovered.

HOPE TO AVERT STALEMATE IN FRENCH DEBT

Negotiators Meet Late Today in Last-Minute Settlement Attempt

Washington, Sept. 29 (A.P.)—With little more than forty-eight hours for actual negotiations, unless the departure of the French mission is postponed, another meeting of the negotiators attempting a settlement of the French debt has been called for late today.

Facing this situation, the heads of the two groups decline to admit an actual stalemate had been reached, and some members of the American commission profess to believe an improvement had been noted within the last twenty-four hours. This feeling is not unanimous among the commissioners.

The original French offer roughly was to begin paying $25,000,000 a year and to increase the payments during ten years at a regular rate. The average payment for a period of sixty-two years is understood to have been $90,000,000 annually. M. Caillaux raised the initial payment for 1926 to $30,000,000, retaining the same average of $90,000,000 yearly. The Americans felt an average of perhaps $165,000,000 annually during the sixty-two-year period would be better, although they did not raise any difficulties respecting the French payments for the first years.

M. Caillaux raised his average to $100,000,000 a year, and it is understood the Americans reduced theirs from $165,000,000 to $157,000,000 a year.

LOOT GRAVE IN BURNED BODY MYSTERY

Police Stop the Funeral Over Charred Corpse to Probe Disappearance of Man

Birmingham, N. Y., Sept. 29 (A.P.)—Investigators of the counties today sought to solve the burning to death of a man at first believed to have been Fred G. Beale, insurance man, in an automobile accident near Hancock and the discovery of a looted grave in the vicinity.

Police stopped the funeral sevices over the body, charred beyond recognition, and withheld the identity of the corpse which had been disinterred and removed from the little cemetery near the scene of the accident.

WIRE HIS WIFE

Suspicion was aroused after the open grave was found by officials. Other unexplained circumstances led to an investigation in which Broom, Delaware and Wayne County, Penn., officials joined.

The insurance agent wired his wife Friday he would return late at night, but he failed to reach home. The next day his car, wrecked and burned, was found on a little frequented road near Hancock with the body in it. On a tree hung a coat, identified as Beale's. A sum of money, said by business associates to approximate $2,000, was missing, as were rings, a watch and jewelry.

A coroner, reported not to be a physician, rendered a verdict of accidental death. Later examination disclosed the body might be that of a man dead several weeks.

IDENTIFICATION IMPOSSIBLE

Then came the discovery of the open grave.

Basing identification on a knotted bone in the elbow, where Beale as a boy sustained a fracture, the man's father and brother, according to Mrs. Beale, are certain the body is that of their relative. Experts declared positive identification impossible, saying the fire reduced the bones to ashes that crumbled when touched and burned the legs away to the knees.

KELIHER RAPS CANDIDACY OF FITZ

Sheriff Furnishes Figures to Show the Doctor Is No Great Vote Getter

John F. Fitzgerald comes to bat today amid a chorus of "Sweet Adelines" from his cohorts and a raucous staccato of raspberries from the camp of Sheriff John A. Keliher.

The fighting sheriff knew in advance that Fitz would make his formal announcement for Mayor today, so he sent over a preparatory barrage of figures for the purpose of overwhelming the Dearo campaign in its inception.

The sheriff talks figures, not sentiment and pristine glory. Ancient days have no place in the musical program of the Master of the Stone House on Charles street, who may paraphrase a famous old song and make "Big Gray Jug" his battle hymn.

Keliher attacks the complacency with which Democratic Boston apparently accepts as an axiom the theory that Fitz is a wonderful vote getter. Keliher wants to know just where the doctor has attained this reputation, and he cites figures that at least cause some thinking.

CAMPBELL "IN AGAIN."

The Keliher campaign is opened in earnest with headquarters in the Lawyer's Building, at No. 1 Beacon street, and a committee that includes influential folk in every part of the district.

Perhaps the boom the Keliher campaign has taken caused Clerk of Courts Francis A. Campbell to announce his candidacy. Anyway it is announced. The clerk was one of the early possibilities, but had dropped out of the spotlight for some time. He is now in again.

District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien adopted the very reverse of the Teddy Glynn plan of campaign. The Fire Commissioner started out with a big ballyhoo in just the places where the political world knew he would receive just such a big ballyhoo, in his own and Curley's Roxbury district, and in Charlestown. O'Brien, on the other hand, started his campaign in South Boston where he is none too strong, making house-to-house meetings his early battle plan.

BACK OF DR. FITZGERALD.

W. T. A. Fitzgerald invaded the Cove district where he was well received.

The practical politician is an odd bird. He has at his tongue's end so many details, some important and some trivial, while he overlooks entirely points of the greatest importance simply because they are out of his world.

Said practical politician might have learned something had he been on the Cunard Line dock when the Scythia arrived carrying on its passenger list Dr. Fitzgerald's son-in-law, Joseph P. Kennedy.

And the young financier immediately enlisted himself on the side of practically every member of the Fitzgerald family. They don't want to see him in this mayoral fight.

Why?

Why do they put holes in doughnuts?

A doughnut hole, according to Hoyle, is the essence of nothing. It conveys nothing to you, it has no historical reason for so being, it disfigures the spherical symmetry of the luscious brown dough it is composed of—why the hole in the doughnut?

"In cooking a doughnut most of the grease soaks into the centre," said a famous doughnut maker at the New England Bakers' Association meeting at Swampscott. By leaving a hole in the centre the doughnut does not absorb so much grease and is therefore more edible and digestible.'

"Aw, it's because these here baker guys can make more doughnuts out of the dough," said a youngster selling Boston Evenings Americans on Washington street. "Sometimes the doggone hole is as big as the rest of the doughnut."

"The hole in the doughnut?" replied a woman in the Back Bay who makes superb doughnuts for family consumption, and is very particular that they always look as appetizing as they taste. "That is very easily explained. Cooking in grease the doughnut would become a fantastic, puffed and distorted thing. The hole allows the grease to cook through the entire dough and the doughnut keeps its shape."

If you want to uncurl the question on your mental question mark, send your "Why?" to The Why Editor, Boston Evening American.

ORDER OF ST. FRANCIS HEARS FR. BURKE

Rev. Fr. Burke, O. P., of the Dominican Order in New York, addressed the members of the Third Order of St. Francis at the novena in St. Leonard's Church, North End. Fr. Burke stressed many virtues in the life of St. Francis which men and women today might emulate. The sermon was followed by prayers and benediction by Rev. Fr. Robert, O. F. M., spiritual director of the order.

200 CHINESE BULLETS HIT AMERICAN STEAMER

Shanghai, Sept. 29 (I.N.S.).—A message from the upper Yangtse River today reports that Chinese troops fired upon the American steamer Chichuen. The vessel was struck by more than 200 bullets, the report said. One person was wounded, according to advices. The gunboat Paloe has been dispatched to convoy the Chichuen.

NEWTON MERCHANTS BUY SHADE FOR TRAFFIC COP

The sight of Traffic Officer James F. Kelley of the Newton police sweltering in the sun at his traffic post at Washington, Watertown and Waltham streets, West Newton, has touched the hearts and also the purses of a group of West Newton merchants. They raised a fund and bought the officer a shade for his traffic stand to protect him from the sun.

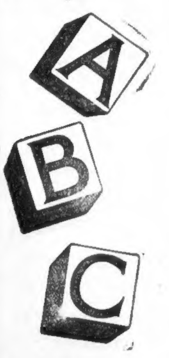
New England's Neighborhood Toll Service

Simple as



If you don't know the number ask your local information operator

Nowadays in New England, calling a distant telephone is as simple as calling a telephone across the street.

"Neighborhood Toll Service," in every detail, follows the familiar routine of a local call.

Signal your own operator.
Give her the number you want.
Hold the line for a completed connection or a report.

This is the fastest, simplest form of toll service known. Yet along both the highways and byways of speech, the miles must still be dealt with by men and women, and machines. You must not expect quite the speed of local calls.

With a few exceptions, we do not undertake at present to give this service to points beyond our own territory.

We do give it between more than a million telephones in five states. It is thoroughly practical, else it would not be offered.

PIMPERNEL and ROSEMARY by Baroness Orczy

A Thrilling Story of a Love That Sweeps Down the Barriers of Hatred and Defeats a Fiend's Plots

Posed by Alice Olsen, of "Rose Marie." (Photo by C. G. Snyder.)

The engagement of Rosemary Fowkes, followed quickly by a wedding, is a society sensation. Rosemary, however, entered into the bargain with a love that even she could not understand.

(Copyright, 1925, George H. Doran Co.)

CHAPTER II.

TO Peter Blakeney, Rosemary Fowkes' engagement to his friend Tarkington seemed not only incredible, but impossible. The end of the world! Death! Annihilation! Hell! Anything!

But it could not be true.

He was playing at Lord's that day; Tarkington told him the news at the luncheon interval, and Peter had thought for the moment that for once in his life Tarkington must be drunk. But Tarkington looked just as he always did—grave, impassive, and wonderfully kind. Indeed, he seemed specially kind just then. Perhaps he knew. Perhaps Rosemary had told him. Women were so queer. Perhaps she did tell Tarkington that he, Peter, had once been fool enough to——

Anyway, Tarkington was sober, and very grave and kind, and he told Peter in his quiet, unemotional way that he considered himself the happiest man on God's earth. Of course he was, if Rosemary——But it was impossible!

That evening Peter went to the Five Arts' Ball at the Albert Hall. He knew that Rosemary would be there; he had designed the dress she would be wearing, and Tarkington told him, sometime during that afternoon, that he was taking his fiancee to the ball.

His fiancee! Dear old Tarkington! So kind, so unemotional! Rosemary's husband presently! Ye gods!

At the Albert Hall ball Peter wore that beautiful Hungarian national dress that had belonged to his grandfather, a wonderful dress of semi-barbaric splendour, with the priceless fifteenth-century jewelery which he had inherited from his mother. Peter dressed himself with the greatest care. If a thing was worth doing at all, it was worth doing well, and Rosemary had said once that she would like to see him in the dress.

But during that hot afternoon at Lord's, while he dressed, and now inside the crowded, stuffy Albert Hall, Peter did not feel as if he were really alive. He did not feel like a personage in a dream, he only felt that the world as he had seen it since luncheon time, was not a real world. Someone had invented something altogether new in opposition to the Creator, and he, Peter, being no longer alive, was permitted a private view of the novelty.

It appeared to be a very successful novelty. At any rate, the numberless puppets who raised shrill voices so that Peter might hear what they said, all declared that this ball was incontestably the most successful function of the season.

And Peter was quite sure that somewhere in the dead, forgotten world of long ago he had heard such an expression of opinion over and over again.

Anyway, in this Albert Hall of the newly invented world things were much as they had been in the old. It was crowded. At one time there was hardly room enough to move, let alone to dance. Certain contortions of the body being called dancing, now as then, and certain demoniacal sounds made on hellish instruments by gentlemen of color being

2 MEN HURT IN TERRIFIC BLAST

Girls in Panic as Winchester Explosion Wrecks Office; Razes Light Pole

A shallow blast, hurling huge rocks in all directions, injured two men, damaged a number of automobiles, snapped off an electric light pole and threw a number of girl workers into panic today at the quarry of the General Crushed Stone Company, Holton street, Winchester.

James Welsh, eighteen, of Albany street, Woburn, standing 200 feet distant from the blast, was struck on the neck by rocks and rendered unconscious.

CRASHES IN ROOF.

Charles Pizzano, forty, of Irwin street, Winchester, suffered "shell shock" when he was struck by flying rocks on the head, and ran blindly, shrieking through the streets.

Both men were taken to the Winchester Hospital, from where Pizzano was sent home after treatment. Welsh was held for observation.

Through the roof of the company office, near the quarry, several jagged rocks crashed, frightening the girl clerks almost into hysterics and narrowly missing some of them.

RAZES LIGHT POLE.

A number of automobiles were parked on the company property and the tops of these suffered considerable damage.

The blast and rock barrage sheered down an electric light pole, which carried the wires with it, effectually putting the entire circuit out of commission in that vicinity.

Officials of the company refused to give the cause of the damaging blast, but workmen declared the explosive had been laid too shallow.

HOOVER SCOUTS PLANS TO ABOLISH SHIP BOARD

Washington, Sept. 29 (A.P.).—A transfer of functions of the Shipping Board and Fleet Corporation to the Commerce Department is not contemplated by administration officials, Secretary Hoover said today. He said a committee of cabinet officers had advised the separation of the Fleet Corporation from the Shipping Board, but that at the same time the Shipping Board was held to be a necessary regulatory body over ship rates. None of these regulatory functions, he added, coincided or conflicted with the duties of the Commerce Department in aid of navigation and marine inspection and there would be no purpose in transferring any board functions to his department.

EVIL SPIRITS AND CASH BOTH GO

Malden Artist Tells Police He's Minus $2,950 After Visiting Gypsy Girl

Frenzied finance carried on in the exotic surroundings of a gyspy camp was abruptly halted today when Catherine Govitch and Marie Petrovitch, alleged gypsies, were fined $100 and $50, respectively, after appearing before Judge Thomas H. Dowd in Central Municipal Court on a larceny charge.

Lincoln Webberfield, of Concord, N. H., was the complainant. He told police a band of gypsies encamped in the North End had promised to double his money if he followed their advice. Webberfield did so. He claims to have lost $1,500 in the vain effort to double that sum. The police charge it was the old sotry of switched envelopes.

SEEKING BAND.

Simultaneous with the arraignment here the police of Malden sent out an alarm for a gypsy band which is believed to have relieved George W. Coldy, prominent artist in the exclusive West End section of Malden, of $2,500 during the casting out of evil spirits which surrounded the painter.

Coldy, whose faith in the band was centred on the activities of a young girl, known to his as Roseta Margarita, was finally convinced he had been victimized. In telling of the plot he revealed the method of operation was practically the same as in the Webberfield case.

HE SOUGHT ADVICE.

Coldy went in search of advice from a fortune teller. He encountered the winsome Roseta who sorrowfully informed him he was surrounded by evil spirits. To ward off these joy killers he must sew $1,500 in a cloth and fasten it to his underclothing. The advice was taken.

A return trip found the evil spirits still present. This was proved when Roseta had Coldy spit down the neck of a chicken. The chicken died. Thus, she said, the spirits were still present. More money was needed. Coldy raised $1,800 by mortgaging his home at No. 25 Cedar street. This, with the original $1,500 and $50 in petty cash, found its way in the bundle. He was told to return today.

The painter paid the call today and found that the gypsies had decamped from their lair. They went in such haste Saturday night they left even their personal belongings. Coldy opened the money jackage. It contained $2 stage bill and a quantity of newsprint paper. He believes the bundle was switched on him.

Malden police are searching for ythe gang, while Coldy's contemplated trip abroad on October 12 is at least temporarily delayed.

MAY HAVE 'FORTUNE IN A FIDDLE'

Boston experts are appealed to in an effort to establish if the violin shown above is a genuine Guarnerius. Mrs. Earl Wallen of No. 713 Watertown street, Newtonville, received the instrument as a wedding gift from her father-in-law and she has come all the way from Sunny California for a valuation on her violin.

CRIPPLE KILLS FATHER OVER PISTOL

West Townsend, Sept. 29.—Gilbert Richards, twenty-year-old cripple, faces court here today, charged with the murder of his father.

The boy, who has long been a solitary and morbid figure, believing that the world scorned him for his affliction, disobeyed his father and his pent-up bitterness so flamed against his parent that he shot him down, the police say.

Fred Richards, the father, a local weaver, died some hours later in Fitchburg Hospital.

The boy, despite his lameness, put up a stubborn battle against Constable Henry B. Hathaway when the officer attempted to wrest the weapon from him.

The cripple lately purchased an automatic revolver from a New York mail-order house, and had gone to a pond in the rear of his home to shoot frogs. When his father learned that the boy had the gun he became alarmed, because the boy had been acting so strangely that his father feared what use he might make of it.

The father went to the pond and ordered the boy to give up the weapon. The cripple refused, and then the father told him he would call the sheriff and force him to give up the gun.

The father approached the boy, who was sitting in a dark corner, and when he was within a few feet the son pulled out the gun and fired point blank at his father, who fell instantly, the bullet in his abdomen.

Before the boy coud turn his gun on Hathaway the constable grappled with him and disarmed him.

ULSTER POLICE ESCORT PRIEST TO FREE STATE

Dublin, Sept. 29.—Father Michael O'Flanagan, for several years the Republican representative in America, and Eamon Donnelly, Republican member of the northern Irish Parliament, were arrested at Lurgan in Ulster. After passing the night in the police barracks they were escorted to the Free State border. The police swooped down on them while they were attending a concert. Like Eamon De Valera, their presence is forbidden in Northern Irish territory.

WOMAN THINKS VIOLIN GENUINE GUARNERIUS

A "fortune in a fiddle," might well describe the wedding gift of Mrs. Earl Wallen of No. 713 Watertown street, Newtonville, who, a few weeks ago, left sunny California to come to this city seeking an appraisal by experts of a violin presented to her by her father-in-law.

Pasted on the inside of the instrument is a label bearing the inscription, "Giuseppe Guarnerius, Fecit Cremona, 1720, I. H. S.," which translated into everyday English, informs the reader that Guarnerius made the violin in Cremona, Italy, in the year 1720.

Guarnerius, who was a co-temporary of Stradivarius in Cremona, was born in 1687 and died in 1745. His name is famous throughout Europe as the maker of fine violins, and all the instruments which left his shop were known as "del Gesu" makes.

The appelation "del Gesu" arose from the custom of Guarnerius attaching to his label the letters, "I. H. S.," which was the inscription nailed by the Roman soldiers to the Cross on Calvary.

The violin owned by Mrs. Wallen bears all the earmarks of an authentic "del Gesu," and she hopes to hear from Hub connoisseurs of old types that she is the possessor of a rare specimen of a Guarnerius.

CAILLAUX PRESIDENT OF SARTHE COUNCIL

Le Mans, France, Sept. 29 (A.P.).—Joseph Caillaux, Minister of Finance, who is now in the United States in connection with the French debt funding discussion, was elected president of the general council of the Department of Sarthe. M. Caillaux received 21 votes as against 12.

LOOSE WIG BENNETT'S UNDOING

When It Fell Off Cop Recognized Him; Then Gun Play

James E. Bennett, Chelsea thug, lies at death's door in Whidden Hospital, Everett, a bullet in his abdomen from the gun of Patrolman Felix Dumas of the Everett police.

James E. Bennett, Chelsea thug, lies at death's door in Whidden Hospital, Everett, a bullet in his abdomen from the gun of Patrolman Felix Dumas of the Everett police.

The capture of the criminal and man of many prison escapes came as the aftermath to a strange gun duel fought in the streets of Everett, one duelist the blue-clad patrolman, the other apparently a woman.

For weeks, dressed as a woman, Bennett had fooled the police, who have been on a vigilant watch for him, and only the fact that his wig fell off betrayed him and brought him into the shadow of death or a prison cell.

Two women were driving through Everett in an automobile. Two youngsters saw the registration number on the auto and knew that it had been stolen. They reported to Patrolman Dumas.

WIG FELL OFF.

He recognized one of the women as Mrs. McGinnis of Malden street, Everett, sister of Bennett. The other "woman" Dumas did not know. They alighted from the automobile at his order, and as they did so the blonde wig of one of the attractive pair fell off.

Bennett was the first to realize that he had betrayed himself and he started to run. Dumas drew his gun and fired in the air to stop the fugitive, who was making high speed with the obstructing skirts held high.

Bennett stopped, drew his gun from the folds of his skirt, and opened fire, narrowly missing not only the patrolman, but his own sister and the two boys who had been the instruments of his downfall.

THUG TUMBLES.

Dumas then took careful aim and fired, not in the air this time, as he had begun to realize the real identity of "the woman." The shot took effect in Bennett's abdomen and he crumpled to the ground.

Though but a youth, Bennett has had a hectic career, escape after escape being the high lights.

He made a daring escape from Chelsea court, where he was held on a robbery charge, when he ran to a window, leaped to an electric light pole, and slid to the ground.

Later, with two pals, he escaped from the Everett police station.

Still later, after being arrested, with the same pals, in Pittsfield, Maine, he made two unsuccessful attempts to escape from the court house, he finally succeeded in getting away from the Thomaston prison, from which he is still a fugitive.

Even if Bennett survives his wound the police believe that he will spend most of the rest of his life in prison, if one can be found to hold him.

In addition to a long list of crimes with which he is directly charged, he is suspected of being involved in many others, among them the shooting of Patrolmen Thomas F. McCabe and Joseph F. Condon in the Back Bay in November, 1924.

DINE ON MUSHROOM WEIGHING 21 POUNDS

Buffalo, Sept. 29 (A.P.).—Walter Hayes, young society man, invited a party of friends to a royal feast last night. The chief dish was a mushroom of the puffball variety weighing 21 pounds and measuring 5 feet 1 inch through the thickest part. It was picked near Mr. Hayes' Summer home at Pleasant Beach on the North Shore, about fifteen miles from Buffalo. Mr. Hayes believes the puff ball was the largest ever found in these parts

PITCHERS TO DECIDE VICTOR OF WORLD SERIES

JOHNSON SET FOR BIG TEST

Walter and Coveleskie Must Each Win 2 Games to Keep Title in Washington

By NICK FLATLEY.

Pitching, a great factor in every World's Series, looms up as important as ever in the not far distant Pirate and Senator joust. The chap who can tell whether the great Washington right-handers, Johnson and Coveleskie, can each turn in two great ball games in the course of five or six days, can tell the result.

The Senators, down through the campaign, used four hurlers. Zachary and Reuther, left-handers, worked along with the two great veterans aforementioned. But the southpaws do not figure to show strongly in the American League plan of campaign against the Pirates.

The Pittsburgh champions murder portsiders. They hit mostly from the right side of the plate, and they blaze away recklessly when the southies are sent in. National League managers, all year long, never served this kind of chucking to the new leaders, until it couldn't be helped. They will get one left hander in the series, undoubtedly, but it will not be until the two right handers have tried to manufacture a lead for Bucky Harris.

Johnson and Coveleskie are at the top of the American League pitchers. They have been beating anybody and everybody all year. In a short series, they figure to beat the Pirates once, each of them.

But the first wins will be merely the foundation. They will have to repeat, unless the Pirates lose all form, and become southpaw victims. And there's no reason to expect or look for that.

The great Walter appeared three times in the series against the Giants a year ago. He didn't win until the last game, in which he made history's most dramatic and thrilling rescue. He will have to clutch an early game in this tilt, or his team will go down to defeat.

Coveleskie, almost as old in service as Johnson, isn't a quick repeater. He has the best spitball in the game now, and will give the Corsairs plenty of trouble.

Manager McKechnie has five pitchers with enough stuff and youth to start games and breeze through, if things get breaking well. Two of his stars—Meadows and Aldridge—are veterans, but the other three have youth with its resiliency. Yde, Kremer and Morrison are all gluttons for work, and have been showing their best since mid-Summer.

The bespectacled Lee Meadows is the best Pirate pitcher. This veteran can make any club like it, when he's good. And he was wonderfully good, right down through the stretch.

(Tomorrow's article will discuss the outfielders.)

FLATLEY CALLS 'EM

THE explosions that marked the football opening show that the big teams are running true to form. Principal interest centered in Notre Dame, where Rockne was building a new team. His outfit ran over the enemy, and showed some more of their football that's unbeatable. Knute has lost his horsemen, but he evidently has some very fine apprentice riders. Gil Dobie emitted a fearsome wail last week, then tossed a steam roller onto the gridiron. Teams that can run up big early scores have the fundamentals that mean so much.

THERE'S an optimistic air around Harvard that's healthy, though it may not mean much. There was the same cheerfulness last Fall, until injuries wrecked the squad. Bob Fisher has a few young men who may become stars, if they don't get cracked too much. He has the right psychology when he encourages them. Nobody is good unless he thinks so. Once on a time, poor Yale teams could walk all over good Harvard elevens. Later on weak Crimson teams regularly smeared the Blue. It was all a matter of spirit and confidence. Harvard had many lean years before Percy Haughton instilled the confidence that was requisite for victory. Bob Fisher and Charlie Daley may do the same thing.

BOSTON is interested in Columbia football this fall, because Charlie Crowley is carrying on the work there that Percy Haughton started. Haughton was a Boston institution. He manufactured victory at Harvard from practically nothing. He knew men and football. He had a fiery spirit and could sprinkle his flame about. In a single year, he had accomplished miracles for the New York college. It was on the way to glory. Crowley, a worker under Haughton, will try to keep the team on the same path.

HARVARD CREW PRACTICE TO START SOON

Harvard rowing will be under way by tomorrow. Coach Ed Stevens reached Cambridge, coming from his home in Oregon. He had a conference with the rowing authorities and came to the boat house to renew old friendships and look over equipment.

BUD EDGERLY STILL IN BROCKTON HOSPITAL

Brockton, Sept. 29.—Examinations by Dr. Peirce H. Leavitt, squad physician, today revealed injuries to Captain Sanford Roland of the Brockton High School football team, and Francis Doherty, halfback and punter on the eleven.

William "Bud" Edgerly, flashy Medford High halfback, who suffered a broken ankle in the game here Saturday, is still at the Goddard Hospital.

MACOMBER IS MOVED UP TO VARSITY

By TED LYNCH.

The most recent change in Harvard's varsity lineup has Macomber, formerly a member of Team C, as varsity center on team A. He replaces Jack Adie, who has been shifted to the third team. Macomber is much heavier than Adie and has more fight.

With Macomber at center, Jake Turner, who is rated as a center on Team B, will probably be shifted to tackle on the first team, filling the vacancy left by Clem Coady, who will play at fullback. Coady has improved in his backfield play and is quickly developing into as a clever a defensive back as the perfect Gherke.

All chance of the former Newton lad returning to tackle was lost when the backfield squad was left so small by the injuries to Jack Mahar and Henry Chaunfey and the shifting of backs Doherty and Sayles to end. Coady will probably do the kicking in Saturday's game with Resselaer.

Besides the regular varsity training table Head Coach Bob Fisher has made a scrub training table consisting of twenty-three players. The list includes as centres: Burke and Hayne; as guards: Manley, Savory, Hartwell and Burglund; as tackles: Victor, Tilt, Hyland and Rice; as ends: Rudman, Coolidge, Hitch and Robinson. The quarterbacks are Crawford, Gillies and Burns; and as backs: Donaldson, Pratt, Innes, Goldenson, Garrison and North.

GRIDIRON NEWS OF EASTERN COLLEGES

Yale found the weather too hot for strenuous work and a dummy scrimmage for the varsity and a light setto for the seconds and scrubs completed the day's menu. Ben Butterworth, tackle, was absent from practice, and Vandergrift was tried out in his place. Larry Noble, former Kent School star, relieved Ed Cottle in the first string backfield.

Princeton put in five hours of hard practicing, including a long drill with the forward pass. Caulkins is shining in the practice sessions, with Jake Slagle showing up well at the passing game. Bridges seems to be the best receiver of the pass. The Tiger coaches are pointing toward the Navy game which will be played at Baltimore in three weeks.

Brown discovered after Saturday's game that Captain Stifler was ill in the infirmary with quinsy sore throat and tonsilitis. Although he is improving rapidly he will be unable to play against Colby Saturday. McDonald was the only player injured in the Rhode Island game who has not put in his appearance at practice yet, but he is expected out tomorrow.

Dartmouth's backfield situation has passed the early stages of experiment and has developed into a struggle for priority between McAvoy, Myles Lane and Win Robinson for the left half position. Robinson was again put back on the seconds. Tully is waging a fierce tussle for his old end berth which is now being occupied by Straight.

Bowdoin starts a strenuous week in preparation for Williams Saturday, with the entire squad in good health after the St. Stephen's game. The coaches spent much time going over the mistakes of the first game, and also presented their charges with some new plays.

Williams suffered two severe losses in the Hamilton game with Puggy Smith, left halfback, and Dunning, sophomore tackle, out for a month or more. Fall or Tenney will probably be used in Smith's place in the backfield.

Twi Players Are Given a Banquet

Players on the teams in the Walpole-Norwood Industrial Twilight League were given a banquet in Everett Hall, Norwood, which was largely attended by citizens of both towns. Benny Murray, Norwood High School coach, and president of the league, presided. The guests included Chairman Thomas B. Mulvehill of the Norwood selectmen, Town Manager Hart of Walpole, Jack Ryan, Red Sox battery coach; Phil Todt and Charlie Ruffing of the Sox, representatives of the plants which had teams in the league, and Walter C. Nickerson, sport editor of the Boston Evening American.

ROXBURY A. A. TO HAVE FAST GRIDIRON TEAM

From present indications, the Roxbury A. A. will be representer on the gridiron this Fall with one of the fastest semi-pro teams in the State. The Roxbury boys have been undergoing strenuous practice sessions in order to make a flying start on October 3, when it plays the Whitman A. L. at Whitman, and then tackles the Fittons on the following day at East Boston. Last season the local team won five out of the eighth games it played, having met such teams as University of Peabody, Fittons, Revere, Pawtuxet, Haverhill, Dedham, Tremonts of Lawrence and Whitman A. L., scoring the first touchdown made against University of Peabody since 1922. The Roxbury outfit has a few open dates remaining on its schedule, and any fast team desiring a good attraction for Saturdays or Sundays will be accommodated by calling Manager Walsh at Jamaica 2862-M between 6 and 7 in the evening.

COLUMBIA TO BE POINTED FOR OHIO STATE GAME

New York, Sept. 29.—Now that it is evident Columbia's football team can dispose of its minor opponents without much trouble, Coach Charlie Crowley will start to point his squad for the Ohio State game at Columbus on October 17. Judging by reports from the Mid-west, the Blue and White faces a tough opponent in the Buckeye eleven.

Coach Jack Wilce is reported to have a man nearly the equal of Grange in the person of Marek, a sophomore. Bell, another sophomore, compares favorably with Pease, Columbia's captain and quarterback.

FRICK ON JOB

HERE we have Ford Frick, one of the sport writers with whose work the readers of the Boston Evening American are familiar. He will be on the job or the International News Service during the World Series. This newspaper has the full news service of that organization. Watch for additional announcements regarding the big baseball party to be given at the local ball yards during the series.

M'AULIFFE ANXIOUS TO GIVE CAV A SURPRISE

VISITING MENTOR FORMER PUPIL OF EAGLES COACH

By BILL CONSODINE

Wanted—A football coach who can put a winning team on the field next Fall. Salary $10,000.

That was the situation at Catholic University last Winter when the Washington [illegible] was anxious to get back into the football limelight after failing for a few years to dent the calcium.

[illegible] Jack McAuliffe.

But that [illegible] that [illegible] McAuliffe.

When he [illegible] with Major Frank Cavanaugh's Boston College eleven [illegible] Saturday it won't be the first time for the Catholic U [illegible].

McAuliffe came to Dartmouth from Worcester Academy [illegible] 1912 and [illegible] his first year [illegible] freshman [illegible] season undefeated. The next Fall he was [illegible] Major Cavanaugh's regular eleven [illegible].

In 192[illegible] and 192[illegible] he was head coach [illegible] and then went back to his Alma Mater as [illegible] coach [illegible] Dartmouth's [illegible] of the past few years.

[illegible] Brown games [illegible].

[illegible] American [illegible] Nate Parks of the [illegible] Dimmy Leahy [illegible] an A[illegible] Pinkey Holohan, a Boston [illegible] School product who was developed into a wonderful [illegible] McAuliffe are all results of the new Catholic University coach's talent.

He is well acquainted with the Cavanaugh system of football and expects to stop it next Saturday and earn that first [illegible] of a $10,000 contract for producing a winning football team at Catholic University.

SOX TO BATTLE CHAMPS IN 4 GAMES

Bucky Harris brings his world champion Senators to Boston this evening to give the [illegible] tuning up for next week's series with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The champions close their regular season with the Red Sox, playing four games in the next four days.

This will be the most [illegible] American League series that the [illegible] have [illegible] year [illegible] a chance to look over the Senators [illegible] for the big test.

HORNSBY INJURES TOE IN BATTING PRACTICE

St. Louis, Sept. 29.—Manager Rogers Hornsby of the St. Louis Cardinals was injured in batting practice today and was unable to play in the final game with Boston.

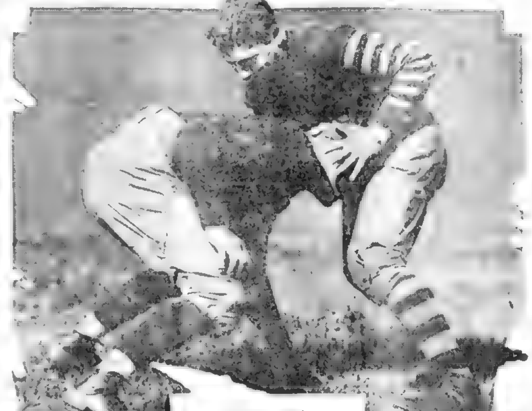
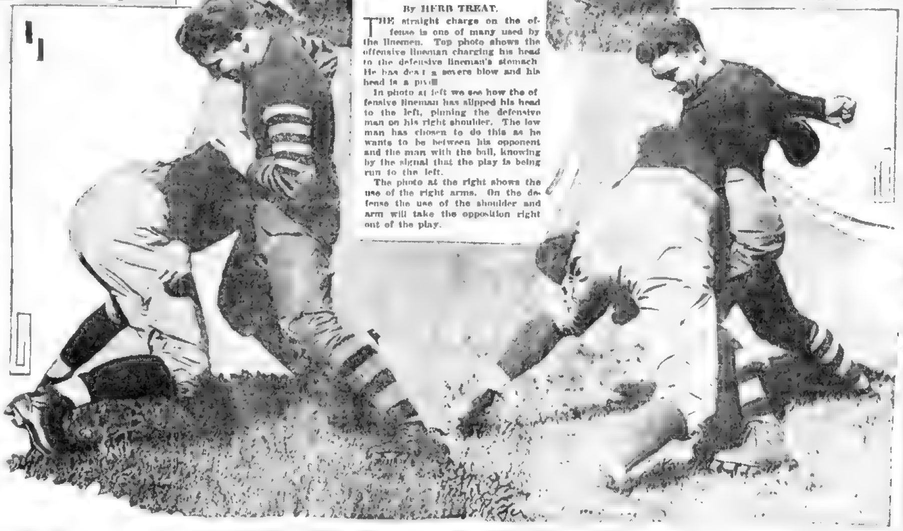
Treat's Football Lessons





By HERB TREAT.

THE straight charge on the offense is one of many used by the linemen. Top photo shows the offensive lineman charging his head to the defensive lineman's stomach. He has dealt a severe blow and his head is a pivot.

In photo at left we see how the offensive lineman has slipped his head to the left, pinning the defensive man on his right shoulder. The low man has chosen to do this as he wants to be between his opponent and the man with the ball, knowing by the signal that the play is being run to the left.

The photo at the right shows the use of the right arms. On the defense the use of the shoulder and arm will take the opposition right out of the play.

WASHINGTON SQUAD ARE GUESTS OF COOLIDGE

Washington, Sept. 29.—Although President Coolidge is no baseball fan, he enjoys meeting the men who are upholding the ideals of American sport. He said so today when he received the pennant-winning Washington team and later had his picture taken with the players and their officers.

As the team passed down the line President Coolidge called some of them by their first name and seemed especially pleased with Walter Johnson, whom he greeted cordially. He said he was glad to see him still in the game.

RADIO TROUBLE AND CURE

By SAMUEL CURTIS
Staff Radio Technician

Q. W. E., Swampscott. Can you tell me whether or not a separate rheostat is necessary in using the new UX120 tube with UV199 tubes?

A. No. The filament voltage of the two types of tubes is the same. The UX120 draws about twice the filament current as the 199, but this does not alter the fact that both types may be used on the same rheostat.

Q. L. B. L., Hartford, Conn. Some months ago I built one of those four tube Boston American Supers. I haven't used it for some time, and now it seems to be in need of overhauling. Can you tell me where I can obtain a diagram of it?

A. All constructional information regarding this receiver is now out of print.

Q. K. O. N., East Boston. Can you tell me why a three circuit set is better than a single current? I want to build one, and don't know which to try.

A. From a theoretical standpoint the single circuit would be more receptive to weak signals. This is because the antenna forms part of the tuned circuit. The single circuit on the other hand, is practically useless near a big city, where powerful broadcasting stations are in use. Under such conditions it tunes so broadly that it is frequently impossible to separate stations. The single circuit will also cause great interference in a neighborhood if it is forced to the point of oscillation in an effort to bring in distant stations.

The three-circuit set has been devised as a means of combining the handiness of the single circuit with the increased selectivity which is afforded by a separate antenna circuit. The three-circuit is much more selective—does not radiate appreciably and is sufficiently sensitive to bring in far West stations under favorable conditions.

Q., P. D., Dorchester—What is the best way to make a neutrodyne regenerative? A.—The best scheme is to do it by means of a separate variable condenser. This condenser gives a capacity feedback similar to the Reinartz hookup.

Q., E. N. B., Wollaston—I have a five-tube set and am troubled with a loud crackling noise which does not seem to be static. I don't think it is the 201-A tubes or the B batteries, as both are new. Can you suggest a cause? A.—If your receiver operates from a storage battery it is probable that acid has become distributed over the top of the cells. This frequently causes noise in the receiver. You can eliminate it by washing off the outside of the battery with a strong solution of ammonia and water. Don't get any of it inside the battery.

Q.—F. A., Brookline. What is the range of a five tube neutrodyne using an indoor aerial?

A.—This is pretty hard to determine. The range of any receiver is dependent upon so many things. Under some conditions, where receiving conditions were ideal, you might hear the West coast on such a hookup. On the other hand there will be locations where you would be restricted entirely to local stations. It is for this reason that reputable radio manufacturers hesitate to state the range of their equipment.

Q.—K. L. H., Portland, Maine. I have a three circuit receiver, and have trouble in getting outside stations when WCSH is on the air. A neighbor of mine who lives next door, says he can tune out of WCSH with ease. Both our sets are the same. Can you help me out?

A.—I think it likely that there is a difference in your aerials which is to blame for the trouble you have with WCSH. I would suggest that you try the trick of inserting a .00025 fixed condenser in series with your aerial. This ought to shift the tuning enough for you to successfully dodge the interference.

LAST NIGHT ON THE AIR

By SAMUEL CURTIS.

The broadcast of "Aida," as given by the Boston Civic Opera Company from the Boston Opera House, was the evening's feature through WNAC. This came through with marvelous clarity, considering the huge difficulties encountered in such a broadcast. I am told that the microphone placement on such a job is the occasion of much planning, and that as many as six microphones are sometimes used. I was listening last night at a small farmhouse about twenty miles from Boston, down on the South Shore, and was bothered a good deal by heterodyne interference from other stations close to WNAC'S wave. People living nearer the city should be thankful they are not troubled in this way.

The WEEI feature was the Gypsies. This homelike group of instrumentalists has lost none of its charm during the long Summer's absence from the microphone. As an instrumental feature, it is very likely the Gypsies will continue in a class by themselves through the coming Winter. That catchy melody which is played both at the beginning and end of their program is just odd enough to linger in your mind.

Local programs were so excellent last night there was little need to look around on the outside. I did, however, run into some very good instrumental music coming from WPG, down in Atlantic City. This "World's Playground" station seems destined to be one of our most reliable outside stations this year, as their signals are usually very loud and clear. The predominating feature of WPG is their marvelous reproductive quality, which never seems to change.

Receiving conditions last night showed some signs of improvement. This is no doubt due to some extent to the fact that one does not have to sit up half the night before it gets dark. Daylight Saving might be all right for automobile owners, but hardly for the distance seeking radio fan. The outside stations showed marked signs of improvement, and while I heard little farther away than New York, this was nevertheless encouraging. WAHG and WMCA came through very well, and for some unknown reason I was able last night to receive WMCA on 340 meters right through the powerful [illegible] of WEEI [illegible] 349 meters [illegible] the capabilities of [illegible] When the waves [illegible] this it is a good sign for [illegible] conditions usually improve at the same time [illegible] observations.

MORE COOKIES AND SMALL CAKES

I was so glad that you enjoyed last week's talk on cakes and it is a real pleasure to share some new ones with you today, some of which have been sent in by our members.

The first is contributed by an out-of-town member and is called

DOT'S COCOANUT DREAMS.
1 cup granulated sugar
1 sq. chocolate (unsweetened)
1-3 cup milk
Boil until mixture forms a soft ball in cold water, then add ½ tsp. vanilla and a small piece of butter. Beat until thick and creamy and while still warm, spread on butterthins, and dredge with shredded cocoanut. Delicious.

And M. C. B., of Wakefield sends a

Recipe No. 1669.
PROXY NUT CAKE
2 eggs well beaten
½ cup butter
1 cup sugar
2-3 cup milk
1 teaspoon salt
2½ cups flour sifted twice.
1 tsp. baking powder
1 cup puffed rice
Cream butter and sugar, add the eggs. Add other ingredients; beat well and add the puffed rice. Stir well and flavor highly with maple flavor. Bake 1 hour in moderate oven. Don't have bottom of cake. Make a frosting of mixture too thin as rice will sink to sugar, water, bit of butter and puffed rice. Flavor with maple and spread at once on cold cake.

"Dot" also sends along two excellent icings.

Recipe No. 1668.
SEA FOAM ICING
1 cup light brown sugar
2 tbsps. of cold water
1 unbeaten egg white
Place over boiling water on stove, and beat with egg beater 6 minutes. Flavor and spread.

Recipe No. 1667.
NEVER FAIL ICING
1 cup granulated sugar
1 unbeaten egg white
3 tbsps. cold water
Place over boiling water on stove and beat with egg beater seven minutes. Flavor and spread. Chocolate icing may be made by adding 1 ounces of melted unsweetened chocolate 1 minute before taking from stove. Coffee icing may be made by using 3 tbsps. of cold boiled coffee in place of water.

Mrs. R. M. S., who lives in Bur[illegible] Boston, sends us a recipe which she assures us is Mrs. Calvin [illegible] for doughnuts. [illegible] says "This recipe was sent to the [illegible] by Mrs. Coolidge's secretary. [illegible] Mazola according to a suggestion in the Boston Evening American by you. They are delicious."

1 cup mashed potatoes
cream
2 eggs
1 cup sugar
½ tsp. salt
½ cup sweet milk
4 tsp. baking powder
Flour
Nutmeg if desired
Cream the butter and sugar. Add eggs and the mashed potatoes and beat well. Next add the milk, and the flour sifted with the salt and baking powder. Add nutmeg or vanilla. Roll out; let stand hour on the board. Use the trimmings for crullers.

And last of all a recipe contributed by Mrs. P. H. P. of West Somerville for

PIMPERNEL AND ROSEMARY

By BARONESS ORCZY

A Story of Love and Mystery That Bares the Heart of the Chief Plotter

called [illegible] the floor of the hall [illegible] the lower tier [illegible] was given over to the performance of [illegible] more or less graceful, whilst Peter looked on [illegible] with this new world of [illegible] which had [illegible] a few hours ago when [illegible] his engagement to Rosemary Fowkes.

He knew just how it would be!

In [illegible] papers the thousands who gyrated here or who looked on at the [illegible] of others would be referred to as being "also present."

He, Peter Blakeney, the famous cricketer and distinguished V. C., would be referred to as being "also present," and there would be a photograph of him [illegible] in one of the [illegible] of his head [illegible] large, in all the illustrated weeklies.

Motley and Medley

Of course there were others, the select few who would be referred to with charming familiarity as Lord Algy Fotznoodle, or Miss Baby Tomkins, or simply as Lady Poo.s or Lord T.m.

And Peter—a kind of disembodied Peter—watched the throng. Ye gods! what a motley and a medley!

From his point of vantage on the floor of the hall Peter scanned the semicircle of boxes where sat more puppets, hundreds of them, watching the thousands down below.

What was the good of them? Peter thought. Why had God made them? What use were they in this new world which some wanton sprite had fashioned in opposition to the Creator?

And then suddenly the puppets all faded away. The new world ceased to be, there was no hall, no dancing, no music, no more puppets, no more Pierrots. There was only Rosemary, and she came up to Peter and said quite gaily, naturally in a voice that belonged to the old world, not the new:

"Won't you ask me to dance, Peter?"

After that [illegible] dancing permits, [illegible] the partner in one's arm. And Peter danced with Rosemary.

Lady Orange always had a box for the big functions at the Albert Hall. It was chic, it was right and it was convenient. It gave her an opportunity of entertaining distinguished foreigners [illegible] in a manner that was both [illegible] and expensive.

Lady Orange thought it bon ton to appear bored at [illegible] function except those which took place at her house in Belgrave square, and now when a procession made up of bedizened [illegible] marched in double file past her box she remarked languidly:

"I think they show a singular lack of imagination. One would have thought these artists would have invented something unique [illegible] for themselves."

[illegible] of comfort perhaps. But it is they who gave the impetus to the imagination of others. Not?"

The man who sat next to Lady Orange spoke with certain gestures of hands and arms that would have proclaimed him a foreigner even apart from his appearance. He had a soft, rich voice, and spoke English with that peculiar intonation which is neither [illegible] nor Slav [illegible] it has the somewhat unpleasant characteristics of both.

Lady Orange, who had pale, round eyes and arched eyebrows that lent to her face a perpetual look of surprise, gazed intelligently about her.

"Ah, oui!" she sighed vaguely "Vous avez raison!"

She would have liked to continue the conversation in French, but General Naniescu was equally determined to speak English.

The Plots Starts

As Lady Orange was going to Bucharest shortly, and desired an introduction to august personages there, she thought it best to humor the general's whim.

"How well you express yourself in our barbarous tongue, M. le General," she said kindly.

"Ah, madame," the general replied, with an expressive shrug, "we in our country are at such disadvantage in the social life of great cities like London and Paris, that we must strive to win our way by mastering the intricacies of language, so as to enable us to converse freely with the intelligentsia of the West who honor us by their gracious acceptance."

"You are a born courtier, Monsieur le General," Lady Orange rejoined with a gracious smile. "Is he not, ma chere?" And with the edge of her large feather fan she tapped the knees of an elderly lady who sat the other side of M. le General.

"Oh, Mademoiselle Fairfax was not listening to my foolish remarks," General Naniescu said turning the battery of his mellow eyes on the somewhat frumpish old maid.

"No," Miss Fairfax admitted drily. "Monsieur de Kervoisin here on my left was busy trying to convert me to the dullness of Marcel Proust. He is not suceeding."

"Ah"" exclaimed Naniescu suavely, "you English ladies! You are so intellectual and so deliciously obstinate. So proud of your glorious literature that even the French modernists appear poor in your sight."

"There, you see, ma chere," Lady Orange put in with her habitual vagueness, "always the courtier."

"How can one help being a courtier, dear lady, when for hours one is thrown in a veritable whirlpool of beauty, brilliance and wit? Look at this dazzling throng before us," the general went on, with a fine sweep of his arm. "The eyes are nearly blinded with its magnificence. Is it not so, my dear Kervoisin?"

This last remark he made in French, for M. de Kervoisin spoke not a word of English.

M. de Kervoisin, whose name proclaimed him a native of Brittany, was financial adviser to a multiplicity of small states, all of whom were under the tutelage of France. His manner was quiet and self-effacing when social or political questions were on the tapis, and he only appeared to warm up when literature or the arts were being discussed. He fancied himself as a Maecenas rather than a financier.

Who Is She?

For the moment he felt vaguely irritated because Miss Fairfax — a seemingly unpretentious and socially unimportant elderly female—refused to admit that there was not a single modern English prose writer that could compare with Proust. To the general's direct challenge he only replied drily.

"Very brilliant indeed, my good Naniescu; but, you know, I have seen so much in my day that sights like these have no longer the power to stir me."

"I am sorry for you," Miss Fairfax retorted with old-maidish bluntness. "I have been about the world a good deal myself, but I find it always a pleasure to look at pretty people. Look at Rosemary Fowkes now," she went on, addressing no one in particular "did you ever in all your life see anything so beautiful?"

She made lively little gestures of greeting, and pointed to a couple on the dancing-floor below. Lady Orange turned her pale, [illegible] surprised gaze in that direction, and General Naniescu uttered an exaggerated cry of admiration. Even M. de Kervoisin appeared interested.

"Who is the lady?" he asked.

"She is Rosemary Fowkes," Miss Fairfax said, "one of the most distinguished —"

"Ah! I entreat you, mademoiselle, tell us no more," the general exclaimed with mock protest, "a lovely woman needs no other label but her own loveliness. She is [illegible] amongst all [illegible] is beautiful. What else [illegible] woman to when she is the [illegible] work the Creator ever produced [illegible] enchantress."

"Well," Miss Fairfax rejoined [illegible], "I would tell you, general [illegible] [illegible] interested for anybody [illegible] [illegible] can see [illegible] from childhood upwards [illegible] been taught to use their intelligence for purposes of self-[illegible] ation and self-admiration. Rosmary Fowkes is an exception. She is not only beautiful, but [illegible] ever. Surely you remember those articles on the [illegible] of 'The Evils of Bureaucracy in the Near East?' They were [illegible] 'Uno,' and many doubted at the time that the writer was a woman and a young [illegible]."

[illegible] Naniescu exclaimed, and [illegible] a significant glance at M. de Kervoisin, who [illegible] first uttered an astonished [illegible] [illegible] over the edge of the box [illegible] a closer view of the [illegible] in question.

MAKING A HUSBAND

Sequel to "My Romantic Husband"

By Ann Lisle

SO YOU HAD your phone calls switched to my office. Then the day you and Anne came out here you shut up shop."

"I have no business," Jim declared with something courageous behind his resignation. "Naturally people wouldn't want to trust their money to me just now. But they'll forget. Or if they don't want to invest in oil on my say'so there are other ways of earning a living."

"Jim, you're superb!" I gasped.

It may have sounded banal. But I couldnt help it. Recalling the agonized attempts Jim had made to reestablish himself in the world of work after his return from the war, I saw clearly for the first time how complete and magnificently sweeping had been his sacrifice when he undertook to carry Pat's burden so Jeanie would never see it.

"Babbsie can take care of herself," Neal gently said.

"She won't have to suffer. Let's cut the heroics. When I get over being a coward who doesn't want to face facts, I'll start taking the train for town every morning and I'll find me plenty of work to do. I guess I'm plum lazy. I know I was happy this fortnight—just honeymooning with Anne. I didn't want to think of work. I've had my fortnight. Tomorrow I start showing a few signs of activity." Jim said with an air that tried hard to sound nonchalant.

Pat's hand went to his hair. His lips twitched. B. T. leaned still more patriarchally on his cane as he demanded:

"Well? Spill it, Dalton"

"There are several messages in this list," Pat said, handing Jim a sheaf of papers. "A lot of minor inquires I've dealt with. "Where?" demanded B. T. again.

"I can't go into that," Pat said stubbornly.

THE PRINCESS HAS BOBBED HAIR

Miss Lucyenne Herval, playing the part of the Princess in the Student Prince, now playing at the Shubert Theatre, believes that bobbed hair when marcelled and waved at the Hollywood Bobbing Shop makes the hair look very attractive. "I think that Mr. A. Troccoli is the prince of hairdressers," in an interview at the Copley-Plaza.

Lucyenne Herval

The Hollywood Bobbing Shop has originated many new styles in bobbing and waving. If in doubt as how your hair would look, consult us. Our experience as experts will acquaint you with the proper way of having your hair bobbed. We guarantee 100% service. We specialize in permanent waving. As a special reducement for the next two weeks we will do permanent waving for $15.00. If you want to look your best visit the Hollywood Bobbing Shop at 110 Tremont Street, 46 Bromfield Street, New Studio Bldg., Phone Congress 6437.

By Helen Rowland

MY Daughter, a woman may endure many failings in a husband which she would not abide in a lover.

For a husband is a matter of personal preference. But the Perfect Lover is a type which hath been 'standardized.' Yea, in all things he is authentic!

And whether she be damsel or matron, blonde or brunette, highbrow or flapper, every woman carryeth the same ideal in her heart.

Yea, verily, the way of the Complete Lover is strewn with garlands, and conquests, and pettings and dinner invitations, for, whether he be plain or beautiful, aesthetic or athletic, he possesseth the charm of charms which is a Winning Way.

Behold, he remembereth a woman's preferences and forgetteth not her pet abominations. He is more quick to divine her wishes than a good butler and more thoughtful for her comfort than a trained nurse. But a boor considereth first his OWN convenience.

The Complete Lover flattereth every woman with his eyes and a few with his lips. All his compliments are definite. For he knoweth that a woman preferreth an itemized account of her charms to glittering generalities. But a boor feedeth her cheap apple sauce and springeth his 'line' at the first opening.

The Complete Lover hearkeneth unto a woman's words with gravity and greeteth her opinions with interest. But a boor seeketh to dazzle her with repartee. He is SO clever!

When he escorteth her upon the street the Complete Lover is more comforting and more protecting than a policeman on a busy corner. He is full of chivalry. But a boor sayeth, 'Hurry up!'

The Complete Lover is tender in all things, but the impetuosity of the caveman is not IN him. For he knoweth that a woman, like unto a kitten, preferreth gentle stroking to a crushing caress.

Yea, verily, so subtle are his ways that, though there be seven times seven women present, each woman shall think in her heart, "Lo, I am IT!"

DAILY SHORT STORY

THE THINKER

By Jack Woodford

BOBBY WHIPPLE was always thinking about things, and about nothing did he think more than the fact that Elmira's parents, though they favored the son of the town banker, looked with dreary disapproval upon his own suit. So he sought out Elmira and took her to the drugstore for a soda.

"Elmira," he began, when their straws were drawing well, "you know that I'm an impractical sort of a cuss—inclined to put serious attention in nothing but the inventions I'm always working on—but after all, if we've got love we've got more than all the mad business men in the world can buy with their dirty dollars. Do you think——"

Elmira Willing.

Elmira often did a little plain and fancy thinking herself, although you'd never have guessed it to look at her cherry blossom cheeks and the blown gold of her hair.

"Listen, Bobby," she replied, leaning forward intently, "I'll marry you tomorrow, if you say so, in spite of the folks, and we'll somehow manage to get away from this awful little town where everybody knows everybody's else's business better than they do."

"No, Elmira! I'd rather get your parents' consent. I'd rather have them take us down to the station and see us off. I want to go to Detroit. I've got an offer of a job there in the experimental division of a great factory where they manufacture cars for money and all sorts of wild theories about everything on earth for the amusement of the owner who hasn't yet gotten over the astonishment of his stupendous wealth.

"In fact, I'm going up there tomorrow to talk to them about a gasoline saving device I've invented. would you mind very much, Elmira, if I were to be as honest, only, as an average business man for the next week, if it meant happiness for us in the end?"

"Bobby, dear, I don't care what you do. Yours very truly, Elmira."

So the next day Bobby went to Detroit and Elmira's parents rejoiced mightily, thinking that perhaps he would never come back again; but two days later he was back. He stopped at the town telegraph office, in the railroad station to say a few words to the manufacturer of dots and dashes.

Bobby's Ruse.

"Listen, Mr. Morse, I'm expecting a very important telegram from Detroit; I want you to keep it confidential—don't tell everybody in town about it before you deliver it to me the way you do most telegrams."

After listening to some choice profanity Bobby went on home and waited. Sure enough only a few days later a telegram came for Bobby Whipple:

"Mr. Robert Whipple,
Dekayville, Minnesota:

Offer a quarter million flat for all rights your invention.

HENRY HAMBONE,
Tort Motor Car Co."

Shattering the traditions of telegraph operators in small towns, Mr Morse spread the news and Bobby first got the glad tidings from a neighbor, long before the telegram was delivered to him, so that when it was at last handed to him, he stuck it into his pocket unread, knowing all about its contents.

Then Bobby went to Elmira's father and requested her little hand in marriage. Elmira's father nearly broke his front teeth getting the "yes" out fast enough.

"Of course, you understand," reminded Bobby, "that I haven't any money, and practically no prospects in life. I have an offer of a position in the experimental division of a large motor car company in Detroit, but I haven't even the money to get there."

Dad Hoaxed.

"Oh, that's all right," encouraged the dear old man, "just you and Emy get married, I'll lend you plenty of money to get established in Detroit, and take that position if it will amuse you."

"That's really very kind of you," replied Bobby, "but I must insist that you believe me implicitly when I tell you that I have no money, and absolutely no prospects in life save this position, which does not pay a very large salary."

"Oh bosh, we'll set the wedding date for next Tuesday, then I'll lend you plenty to get settled in Detroit until you collect—that is, until you er—get around to paying it back, you needn't worry about it at all."

"All right, if you insist," finally agreed Bobby, "but remember, I've told you the truth about how I am situated." And so it was all settled and Elmira's parents conducted them to the train.

"I never told a single lie to anyone in town," reminded Bobby, as he told his bride about sending the telegram to himself. "You see, the telegram was addressed to me—I had a right to lie to myself if I wished, didn't I?"

"You would make a great business man," sighed Elmira on his shoulder.

DR. REED'S SECRETS OF HEALTH

By Charles A. Reed, M. D.

Former President of the American Medical Association.

WHETHER you make coffee or not you are interested in having good coffee and in having the coffee that you buy go as far as possible. You are, therefore, interested in the underlying principles by which both of these objects may be best attained.

The National Coffee Roasters Association has gone into this question very scientifically and has published the results of its investigation.

In the first place they started on the principle known to every housewife, that water is the medium by which the properties of coffee are extracted from the ground or powdered grain.

It was found that by soaking the ground or powdered coffee in cold water the caffein and the tannic acid were effectively extracted with but little or no flavor derived from oils which imparted a little of the aroma of coffee. Water at one hundred and twelve degrees, however, was twice as efficient as the warm water in extracting color and aroma as well as the caffein and tannic acid.

While boiled water poured over the ground coffee is thus most efficient in extracting all properties from the ground grain when poured over it, the continued boiling of coffee tends to deteriorate the product. Boiled coffee is highest in caffein, tannic acid and in what the chemists call bitter extractives. The continued boiling for more than five minutes drives off the aroma and tends to make the coffee weaker instead of stronger.

These results were reached by the investigators after having tried various methods.

They put ground coffee in cold water, brought it to a boil and boiled five minutes.

They put powdered coffee in cold water and boiled it similarly. They put the medium ground coffee in cold water, brought it to a boil, took it off the fire and allowed it to steep.

They did the same thing with finely ground coffee.

They put some medium ground coffee in a percolator and let the water percolate through it for three minutes.

They did the same thing with coffee similarly prepared, but let the percolation continue for five minutes.

They used pulverized coffee and filtered it with hot water.

Their results demonstrated that to get the highest flavor with only a moderate amount of caffein the last named process was the most effective.

Percolation with warm or moderately hot water for five minutes yielded ten times as much tannin as the filtration process, a very desirable result.

This committee of scientific experts found that most of the deletrious effects of coffee are due to two distinct causes: The first is excessive boiling, the second is the use of ground a second or third time with some fresh coffee.

It is explained that in using the percolator the water does not boil as it seems to, but in reality does not go above one hundred and fifty degrees (boiling being two hundred and twelve degrees). It is by this means that the product is made 25 per cent. higher in caffein than by the filtration process.

BEDTIME STORY

By Foxy Grandpa

"WHAT would you do if you saw a crocodile, Foxy Grandpa?" asked Bobby as we tore our way through the thick foliage of a South African jungle.

"Take his picture," said I. "I've been wanting a picture of one of those big fellows for some time."

"And as for me," said Bunny, taking a long breath and shaking his head, "I would break all records for a four-footed race. That is one picture which would not give me great pleasure to have in my collection."

"Why?" asked Bobby, winking at me.

"There is nothing that a crocodile would relish for a meal more than a rabbit just about my size, so you see I am not taking any chances," replied Bunny firmly.

"Bunny will spot him first, I'm sure," I reassured my little friends.

"Something may warn us," Bunny remarked very thoughtfully.

"Is that so?" I asked quickly.

"Um——" said Bunny, and that was all. You know how he closes [illegible] when you begin to ask him questions.

On our way we continued through [illegible] of bush, hanging vines [illegible] snarled roots.

After one particularly tangled thicket we stopped for a moment for breath, because that is pretty hard work. I was examining the bark of a tree by us, when Bunny pulled my trouser-leg.

"Hss, hss," sounded through the jungle, and then a peculiar whistle.

"Get your camera ready," whispered Bunny, and then he motioned to Bobby to follow him. They disappeared in the bush as I prepared for my subject.

I waited for a moment, expecting to see a huge crocodile crawl [illegible] which I [illegible] I [illegible] and waited, when suddenly I heard a faint rustling near my feet. I looked down, and there was a great big lizard—almost as big as a crocodile [illegible]

He [illegible] I [illegible] just [illegible] so [illegible] He didn't even look at me, but went lumbering past me stopping as if I had asked him for just long enough for me to snap a picture of him.

"Did you get him?" asked Bunny appearing a little later.

[illegible] I [illegible] proudly. [illegible], Bunny, how did you know he was coming?"

[illegible]

"I heard a w[illegible] a big lizard came out and hissed at me," I replied.

"That was a Suave garde. That's what his name means in French. He warns of the approach of crocodiles."

Behold, he remembereth a woman's preferences and forgetteth not her pet abominations. He is more quick to divine her wishes than a good butler and more thoughtful for her comfort than a trained nurse. But a boor considereth first his OWN convenience.

The Complete Lover flattereth every woman with his eyes and a few with his lips. All his compliments are definite. For he knoweth that a woman preferreth an itemized account of her charms to glittering generalities. But a boor feedeth her cheap apple sauce and springeth his "line" at the first opening.

The Complete Lover hearkeneth unto a woman's words with gravity and greeteth her opinions with interest. But a boor seeketh to dazzle her with repartee. He is SO clever!

When he escorteth her upon the street the Complete Lover is more comforting and more protecting than a policeman on a busy corner. He is full of chivalry. But a boor sayeth, "Hurry up!"

The Complete Lover is tender in all things, but the impetuosity of the caveman is not IN him. For he knoweth that a woman, like unto a kitten, preferreth gentle stroking to a crushing caress.

Verily, verily, so subtle are his ways that, though there be seven men, seven women present, each woman shall think in her heart "Lo, I am IT!"

And every woman whom he hath once loved shall remember him with tenderness, and not one of them with regret.

THE THINKER

By Jack Woodford

BOBBY WHIPPLE was always thinking about things, and about nothing did he think more than the fact that Elmira's parents, though they favored the son of the town banker, looked with drear disapproval upon his own suit. So he sought out Elmira and took her to the drugstore for a soda.

"Elmira," he began, when their straws were drawing well, "you know that I'm an impractical sort of a cuss—inclined to put serious attention in nothing but the inventions I'm always working on—but after all, if we've got love we've got more than all the mad business men in the world can buy with their dirty dollars. Do you think——"

Elmira Willing.

Elmira often did a little plain and fancy thinking herself, although you'd never have guessed it to look at her cherry blossom cheeks and the blown gold of her hair.

"Listen, Bobby," she replied, leaning forward intently, "I'll marry you tomorrow, if you say so, in spite of the folks, and we'll somehow manage to get away from this awful little town where everybody knows everybody's else's business better than they do."

"No, Elmira! I'd rather get your parents' consent. I'd rather have them take us down to the station and see us off. I want to go to Detroit. I've got an offer of a job there in the experimental division of a great factory where they manufacture cars for money and all sorts of wild theories about everything on earth for the amusement of the owner who hasn't yet gotten over the astonishment of his stupendous wealth.

"In fact, I'm going up there tomorrow to talk to them about a gasoline saving device I've invented. would you mind very much, Elmira, if I were to be as honest, only, as an average business man for the next week, if it meant happiness for us in the end?"

"Bobby, dear, I don't care what you do. Yours very truly, Elmira."

So the next day Bobby went to Detroit and Elmira's parents rejoiced mightily, thinking that perhaps he would never come back again; but two days later he was back. He stopped at the town telegraph office, in the railroad station to say a few words to the manufacturer of dots and dashes.

Bobby's Ruse.

"Listen, Mr. Morse, I'm expecting a very important telegram from Detroit; I want you to keep it confidential—don't tell everybody in town about it before you deliver it to me the way you do most telegrams." After listening to some choice profanity Bobby went on home and waited. Sure enough only a few days later a telegram came for Bobby Whipple:

"Mr. Robert Whipple,
Dekayville, Minnesota:

Offer a quarter million flat for all rights your invention.

HENRY HAMBONE,
Tort Motor Car Co."

Shattering the traditions of telegraph operators in small towns, Mr. Morse spread the news and Bobby first got the glad tidings from a neighbor, long before the telegram was delivered to him, so that when it was at last handed to him, he stuck it into his pocket unread, knowing all about its contents.

Then Bobby went to Elmira's father and requested her little hand in marriage. Elmira's father nearly broke his front teeth getting the "yes," out fast enough.

"Of course, you understand," reminded Bobby, "that I haven't any money, and practically no prospects in life. I have an offer of a position in the experimental division of a large motor car company in Detroit, but I haven't even the money to get there."

Dad Hoaxed.

"Oh, that's all right," encouraged the dear old man, "just you and Emy get married, I'll lend you plenty of money to get established in Detroit, and take that position if it will amuse you."

"That's really very kind of you," replied Bobby, "but I must insist that you believe me implicitly when I tell you that I have no money, and absolutely no prospects in life save this position, which does not pay a very large salary."

"Oh bosh, we'll set the wedding date for next Tuesday, then I'll lend you plenty to get settled in Detroit until you collect—that is, until you er—get around to paying it back, you needn't worry about it at all."

"All right, if you insist," finally agreed Bobby, "but remember, I've told you the truth about how I am situated." And so it was all settled and Elmira's parents conducted them to the train.

"I never told a single lie to anyone in town," reminded Bobby, as he told his bride about sending the telegram to himself. "You see, the telegram was addressed to me—I had a right to lie to myself if I wished, didn't I?"

"You would make a great business man," sighed Elmira on his shoulder.

DR. REED'S SECRETS OF HEALTH

By Charles A. Reed, M. D.
Former President of the American Medical Association.

WHETHER you make coffee or not you are interested in having good coffee and in having the coffee that you buy go as far as possible. You are, therefore, interested in the underlying principles by which both of these objects may be best attained.

The National Coffee Roasters Association has gone into this question very scientifically and has published the results of its investigation.

In the first place they started on the principle known to every house- the volatile oils. Water at a hundred and fifty degrees Fahrenheit, which is just warm, was efficient in extracting the caffein and the tanic acid with some of the volatile wife, that water is the medium by which the properties of coffee are extracted from the ground or powdered grain.

It was found that by soaking the ground or powdered coffee in cold water the caffein and the tannic acid were effectively extracted with but little or no flavor derived from oils which imparted a little of the aroma of coffee. Water at one hundred and twelve degrees, however, was twice as efficient as the warm water in extracting color and aroma as well as the caffein and tannic acid.

While boiled water poured over the ground coffee is thus most efficient in extracting all properties from the ground grain when poured over it, the continued boiling of coffee tends to deteriorate the product. Boiled coffee is highest in caffein, tannic acid and in what the chemists call bitter extractives. The continued boiling for more than five minutes drives off the aroma and tends to make the coffee weaker instead of stronger.

These results were reached by the investigators after having tried various methods.

They put ground coffee in cold water, brought it to a boil and boiled five minutes.

They put powdered coffee in cold water and boiled it similarly. They put the medium ground coffee in cold water, brought it to a boil, took it off the fire and allowed it to steep.

They did the same thing with finely ground coffee.

They put some medium ground coffee in a percolator and let the water percolate through it for three minutes.

They did the same thing with coffee similarly prepared, but let the percolation continue for five minutes.

They used pulverized coffee and filtered it with hot water.

Their results demonstrated that to get the highest flavor with only a moderate amount of caffein the last named process was the most effective.

Percolation with warm or moderately hot water for five minutes yielded ten times as much tannin as the filtration process, a very desirable result.

This committee of scientific experts found that most of the deletrious effects of coffee are due to two distinct causes: The first is excessive boiling, the second is the use of ground a second or third time with some fresh coffee.

When coffee is steeped the extraction is accomplished just as it comes to a boil.

It is explained that in using the percolator the water does not boil as it seems to, but in reality does not go above one hundred and fifty degrees (boiling being two hundred and twelve degrees). It is by this means that the product is made 25 per cent. higher in caffein than by the filtration process.

BEDTIME STORY

By Foxy Grandpa

"WHAT would you do if you saw a crocodile, Foxy Grandpa?" asked Bobby as we tore our way through the thick foliage of a South African jungle.

"Take his picture," said I. "I've been wanting a picture of one of those big fellows for some time."

"And as for me," said Bunny, taking a long breath and shaking his head, "I would break all records for a four-footed race. That is one picture which would not give me great pleasure to have in my collection."

"Why?" asked Bobby, winking at me.

"There is nothing that a crocodile would relish for a meal more than a rabbit just about my size, so you see I am not taking any chances," replied Bunny firmly.

"Bunny will spot him first, I'm sure," I reassured my little friends.

"Something may warn us," Bunny remarked very thoughtfully.

"Is that so?" I asked quickly.

"Um——" said Bunny, and that was all. You know how he closes up when you begin to ask him questions.

On our way we continued through the maze of bush, hanging vines and snarled roots.

After one particularly tangled thicket we stopped for a moment for breath, because that is pretty hard work. I was examining the bark of a tree by us, when Bunny pulled my trouser-leg.

I looked down at him as he said, "Hark!" and raised his right paw warningly.

"H-s-, hs-s!" sounded through the jungle, and then a peculiar whistle.

"Get your camera ready," whispered Bunny, and then he motioned to Bobby to follow him. They disappeared in the bush as I prepared for my subject.

I waited for a moment, expecting to see a huge crocodile crawl out of the languid stream which I heard near us. I waited and waited, when suddenly I heard a faint rustling near my feet. I looked down, and there was a great big lizard—almost as big as a crocodile himself.

He looked at me and hissed and then went on. I was just about recovering from my surprise, when right there in front of my eyes did crawl a huge crocodile. He didn't even look at me, but went lumbering past me stopping as if I had asked him for just long enough for me to snap a picture of him.

"Did you get him?" asked Bunny appearing a little later.

"I did," I answered proudly. "But, Bunny, how did you know he was coming?"

"Didn't you hear the Suavegarde?" asked Bunny.

"I heard a whistling, and then a big lizard came out and hissed at me," I replied.

"That was a Suave-garde. That's what his name means in French. He warns of the approach of crocodiles."

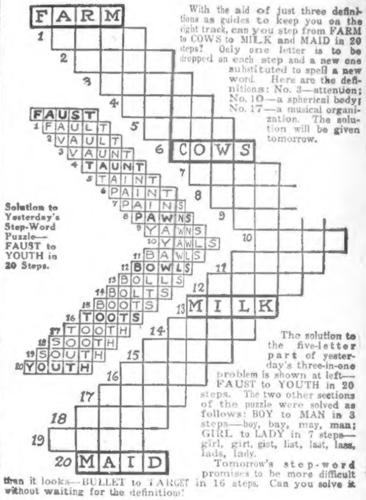
Originator of the Modern Cross-Word Puzzle.



Solution to Yesterday's Step-Word Puzzle—FAUST to YOUTH in 20 Steps.

With the aid of just three definitions as guides to keep you on the right track, can you step from FARM to COWS to MILK and MAID in 20 steps? Only one letter is to be dropped on each step and a new one substituted to spell a new word. Here are the definitions: No. 3—attention; No. 10—a spherical body; No. 17—a musical organization. The solution will be given tomorrow.

The solution to the five-letter part of yesterday's three-in-one problem is shown at left—FAUST to YOUTH in 20 steps. The two other sections of the puzzle were solved as follows: BOY to MAN in 3 steps—boy, bay, may, man; GIRL to LADY in 7 steps—girl, girt, gist, list, last, lass, lads, lady.

Tomorrow's step-word promises to be more difficult than it looks—BULLET to TARGET in 16 steps. Can you solve it without waiting for the definitions!

The time to seek a cure for cancer is in its very earliest stages, the moment you are aware it is there.

Seven-day work-weeks and 365-day work-years constitute a cancer which employers should start treating without delay.

Theodore N. Vail, the successful upbuilder of the American Telephone Company, used to say, "the way to meet trouble is to face it." Railway executives and others guilty of employing men every day of the week and every week of the year should meet this evil by facing it.

D. L. Cease, head of the Railroad Trainman, official publication of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, furnishes the following facts and figures for the readers of this column:

Passenger service wages per day:

Conductors	$6.70
Asst. conductor and ticket collector	5.50
Baggageman, handling exp. and dynamo	5.54
Baggageman, handling express	5.20
Baggageman, operating dynamo	5.20
Baggageman	4.96
Flagman and brakeman	4.70

"If these classes of employees," he adds, "do not make sufficient mileage by regular and overtime in 30 days to give them a monthly wage of, conductor, $210; assistant conductor, $174; baggage, express, $165; baggageman, $154.80; and brakeman, $150, they are guaranteed these amounts."

Through freight service. Conductor $6.16; flagman and brakeman $4.84. For an eight-hour, 100 mile a day. Local and way freight. Conductor $6.68; brakeman $5.24. For eight hours or 100 miles. Yard service. Foreman $6.64; helpers $610; switchtender $4.72.

On one thing every right-thinking American will agree: that the time has come for railway managers to apply their brains to removing the seven-day-week cancer. If they don't, the rest of us will some day have to suffer for their lamentable lack of judgment.

KELLY-SPRINGFIELD CLOSES AKRON PLANT

Akron, O., Sept. 29.—Kelly Springfield Tire Company will cease operations here within a week. Local plant will be dismantled and property sold. Move is in line with the policy of the company to concentrate production at its Cumberland (Md.) plant.

Capacity of Akron plant is 3,500 tires daily, but it has been running on reduced schedule recently, only 500 men being employed. Operations were temporarily discontinued here five years ago when the Cumberland plant was completed, but the company later reopened the local factory.

HANAUER PROGRESSES WITH ST. PAUL WORK

Jerome J. Hanauer of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., who has been handling St. Paul reorganization work, plans to leave on vacation in Europe early in October as result of progress in obtaining deposits of securities. Amount deposited has exceeded $1,000,000 a day since September 15, when $168,000,000 had been sent to bankers.

New York Curb

New York Curb prices were irregular: English Gold, 27½; Vacuum Oil 88¼, up 1; Grimes Radio 11, off 2¾; Elec Investors 62, up ½; Gillette 105⅛, up ⅝; Nizer B 53¾, off ¼.

$1,000 STOCKS APPEAR, BUT ARE FEW

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor.

Although more than 1,000 stocks are now listed on the New York Stock Exchange, those selling at $1,000 a share are few. Northern Pacific, when the late Mr. Harriman was buying for control, was the first stock on the New York board to sell for $1,000 a share. That was in 1901. The other day Michigan Central appeared at $1,000. The latest to make its bow in four figures was S. S. Kresge, "1,000 asked.

* * *

One reason why we have few $1,000 stocks is because that price is, as a rule, too high to obtain any sort of public participation. The custom is, when stocks get to selling up in the hundreds, to split them up by recapitalization.

Boston has boasted of at least one $1,000 stock. About nineteen years ago Calumet & Hecla's old stock hit the four-figure mark. The president of this copper is Rodolphe L. Agassiz, No. 14 Ashburton place.

It was noted with deep regret by many friends that Benjamin B. Hill, who has been associated with L. Sherman Adams for about five years, died Sunday at Troy, N. Y., as a result of injuries sustained in an automobile accident on Sept. 15.

* * *

President James H. Hustis, of the Boston & Maine Railroad will see, according to present plans, the operation shortly of what is believed to be pretty nearly a record army of representatives at work on the big New England carrier's new stocks. It is planned by banking firms to put an organization of 400 men into the field to explain the story to security holders, present and prospective. New 7 per cent. preference stock to the value of $13,000,000 is to be disposed of.

Some vital changes were made in the final underwriting arrangements. Such prior preference stock as is not subscribed for by stockholders will be taken by the underwriters at a market price—less $3 per share—to be agreed upon at the time between the adjustment committee and the bankers. Thus W. Rodman Peabody, chairman of the General Readjustment Committee explained that if the market value agreed upon should be 93, the bankers would get the stock at 90.

* * *

By the way, did you know that Boston & Maine conductors take up 27,000,000 fares in and out of the North Station yearly? Hauling 150,000,000 quarts of milk to the North Station annually, the Boston & Maine might boast the title of being the world's premier "milk road."

* * *

I hear buyers of Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway common are very enthusiatic regarding the future of the stock. Some of the big holders think it will be numbered among the star performers of the Boston Stock Exchange before a great deal of time has passed. They base judgment partly on figures that have come to light in connection with the company's affairs.

* * *

Another local issue, listed on the Boston Stock Exchange, that is being watched by shrewd buyers, is Atlas Tack. The big tack company, I am informed, has been benefiting largely by the change to prosperity that has been creeping into the shoe and other industries.

Once More the Navy Pays

Lives Are Risked So That Their Successors May Learn

Tragedy has again struck at the United States Navy in the sinking of the submarine S-51. The lives of many fine young fighting men have been sacrificed in peacetime, in the third serious accident to our sea forces within a few weeks.

Thousands of Americans are asking, "Why?" Thousands feel that there must be something broadly wrong.

The PN-9, No. 1, attempted her flight to Hawaii without enough fuel, and came near to disaster.

The Shenandoah was torn to pieces by a thunderstorm, into peril of which she had been sent by non-flying superiors over the protest of her skipper, the gallant and skilful Lansdowne.

Before we know the whole story of this latest blow, there is but one consolation for those who ask "Why?"

It is this: The Navy carries on.

More than any other branch of the fighting services the young men of the Navy have a daily stint to do. On almost any day they take their lives in their hands to perfect themselves in the handling of the modern engines of their profession.

In common with the Army, the Navy is learning to fly. In common with the Army, it is paying the cost in lives for flying knowledge. But, unlike the Army, the Navy wrestles every day with man's ancient enemy, the sea. And from his first Sunday in the chapel of the Naval Academy at Annapolis every little midshipman knows what that means. On that first Sunday the never-omitted sonority of prayer "for those in peril on the sea" comes home to him with a direct, personal touch which leaves its mark. They face it. And sometimes they lose.

Nor can there be any more bitter losing than this in a submarine. These men do more than go down to the sea in ships. They thrust themselves and their lives into the very maw of the ever-hungry monster. They go surrounded by all of the developments of modern science and civilization. Yet in the final test, the conjunction of Old Ocean and man's mistakes, these very devices of a scientific civilization combine to strangle them.

And once more Old Ocean has taken toll of those who dare his very gullets that they and others who come after them may know the better his deadly wiles, his man-crushing power.

$4,000,000 of Pocket Money

Maharajah of Kashmir—a Pleasant Job

The Maharajah of Kashmir is dead. His son, Hari Singh, recently conspicuous in a blackmailing plot in London, will succeed him.

Sir Hari, who becomes a Maharajah met the blackmailing young lady and her gentleman friends when his father sent him to do the "grand tour" with $4,000,000 of pocket money to spend. Blackmailers got a considerable part of the pocket money.

What a comedown from the old rulers of Kashmir, in days when that country included much of the Punjab, extending beyond the Indus.

Ancient Sanskrit history tells that the wonderful Valley of Kashmir was once a lake. The great sage, Kasyapa, son of Marichi, who was the son of Brahma, cut a hole through the hills, drained the lake and created the valley.

Little the ancient rulers of Kashmir dreamed that one of their descendants would be sent "to improve his mind and manners" and be blackmailed, in Britain, which in their day was a barbarous, foggy island, inhabited by yellow-haired creatures that ran around half-naked with their stomachs painted blue.

Britain has come up, Kashmir has gone down.

"HE HATH PUT DOWN THE MIGHTY FROM THEIR SEATS, AND EXALTED THEM OF LOW DEGREE."

A day may come, as the North Pole swings around, when our decayed descendants will send their sons to do "the grand tour" up where the North Pole is now.

Kashmir is still worth owning, however. Sir Hari, thanks to British support, will tax and exploit about three million Mohammedans, Hindus, Buddhists and Sikhs, and they all pay something.

Male 'Superiority' Fading

Scientists Find Women Drive Autos Better

The American Automobile Association, after tests by the Institute of Government Research, declares that "there is no basis for the assertion that women drivers are more liable to lose their heads than men."

As a matter of fact, the experiments prove that women are better drivers than members of the male sex.

Dr. F. A. Moss, who conducted the tests, says: "The average reaction time of the ten college women experimented upon was fifty-six seconds, while that of the twenty-five men from the same institution was fifty-nine seconds."

Another myth about the superiority of the male sex seems doomed to death.

Also the American Chemical Society says that women students are twice as proficient as men in the study of chemistry. Of the six prizes offered by the society, consisting of $500 a year for four years, four went to girls and two to boys.

Accelerating Crime Wave

One Way Is to Make More Laws

The latest reminder that this is the home of the free and the land of the unfettered comes from Texas.

The whole weight of the legislative genius of the city of Port Arthur has been directed against another desperate criminal in our midst.

He is the peanut cracker.

No longer can a man crack a peanut in places of public entertainment in that city without incurring the majestic wrath of justice.

One way to accelerate a crime wave is to make enough laws so that everyone will be in the criminal class.

THE LOGICAL UNIFIED, SEPARATE AIR DEFENSE FORCE FOR EFFICENCY AND SECURITY
ARMY DEPTS. ARGUMENTS AGAINST A UNIFIED SEPARATE AIR DEFENSE
NAVY DEPT'S. ARGUMENTS AGAINST A UNIFIED SEPARATE AIR DEFENSE
O. P. WILLIAMS

Their positions do not look any too secure.

Many pretty traditions cluster about the candle. But today its function is almost purely decorative. When people want to do something with light they don't use candles.

Our Army and our Navy appeal to the spirit of romance that is in us. The traditions that cling to both services are fine and noble.

But however we cherish those fine old traditions they should not be allowed to stand in the way of a new light, a new fighting arm—the flying arm. If they are allowed so to stand we will only succeed in making them look ridiculous, like a candle in the sunlight.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By John P. Medbury

STATISTICS show that the average commuter spends half of his life catching trains and the other half missing them.

IT'S nothing to see a man dash into the station with his clothes under his arm.

SOME commuters are so clever that they can put their shoes and stockings on while they're running for the train.

ONE fellow was in such a hurry the other morning that when he got to the city he discovered that he'd forgotten to bring his trousers.

BUT he didn't lose his head. He robbed the office boy.

THIS is why suits with two pairs of pants are so popular. You can always leave one pair at the office.

THE railroad companies are thinking of discontinuing their morning trains. There's no use in running them because nobody can catch them.

IT'S getting so that if a man has an important engagement in the city, he has to sleep in the depot all night.

AND even then he has to lie down on the track so that the train won't come in without waking him up.

DOCTORS claim that nine out of ten commuters have hoof and mouth diseases. They eat and run.

ONE guy was so rushed the other morning that he bit his wife and kissed the toast goodby.

IT'S nothing to see a man look at the doughnut and dip his watch in the coffee.

ONE fellow was so afraid he'd miss his breakfast that he ate it before he went to bed.

IT'S to bad that he couldn't catch the train before he retired and then he'd have nothing to do in the morning.

THE average man doesn't care what the rest of the town looks like as long as it has a pretty station, because that's where he spends most of his time.

"You Said It, Marceline!"

By MARCELINE D'ALROY

ON "LOOKING FOR HUSBANDS"

Even in THESE DAYS
SOME girls are still looking For HUSBANDS,
And many MARRIED WOMEN
KNOW IT. This Makes them SO nervous
That they CALL UP
Their husband at the Office to see if he Is SAFE.
Of course, ANY man
Can answer: "YES, honey,
EVERYTHING is all right!"
Even if it is NOT QUITE right, but the SOUND of her MASTER'S Voice so reassures the wife
That she MAY wait patiently
Till he gets HOME
Before she starts to QUESTION HIM.
SOME girls look for SINGLE MEN, and if
This is WISER for
It is PLAYING THE GAME.
Of course, it is HARDER
To play a SINGLE MAN,
But if a girl has Been on the SQUARE
She can EXPECT a square
Deal in RETURN.

THE FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

Letters Must Not Contain More Than Two Hundred Words.
No Anonymous Communications Will Be Considered

Help Veterans

To the Friend of the People:

The disabled veterans have designed twenty artistic Christmas cards which they are hoping that the public will purchase. At their headquarters on Boylston street, these cards can be examined. They are sending packages of twenty to many who are always interested in the work and accomplishments of these veterans.

Mrs. Clarence R. Edwards is heading the movement to dispose of these cards, and further particulars may be had from the superintendent.

E. T. DUNGAN,
No. 335 Boylston street.

Prohibition Futile?

To the Friend of the People:

Prohibition will never be enforced by legislation in this country or in any other. A thing is right or wrong, not because legislation makes it, but much more by the amount of happiness or misery that it creates.

If the abuse of intoxicating liquor is a curse, the abuse of a law controlling it, must also be a curse.

The Boston American is always fair to its readers. Let us have real law, and order will follow.

Sneezing Season

To the Friend of the People:

The approach of Autumn means to many, the period of sneezing.

Two or more centuries ago, sneezing was shrouded with superstition. It meant death to the sneezer. Later on a sure sign of disease, causing listeners to cry out "God bless you," and then take to their heels.

Now we regard sneezing as a safety valve to get rid of germs from the nose. It is nature's action.

½ of 1 P. C. Sandwiches

To the Friend of the People:

I read in the Boston Evening American lately that an English judge says a sandwich is a meal. This sort of legal decision is to cover the law, not to enlarge the sandwich.

Right here in Boston, the sandwich is perceptibly growing smaller in size. Three bites or less will demolish it. Don't you remember that big bulging sandwich we used to get down near the markets with thick layers of bread and plenty of ham stuck between them? Such measley sandwiches are poked before us today may stop one's gnawing of the stomach, but the hunger hangs round us still.

Fine Arts Defined

To the Friend of the People:

Answering a question in your column, what are the Fine Arts? Allow me to define them: they are architecture, literature, music, painting and sculpture.

This phrase has been greatly stretched. Works typical of the true Fine Arts are on exhibition to the public in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

The library contains a Fine Art room with its attendants, who are upholders of the American art.

I feel sure that they can give your correspondent a complete answer to his question.

STAUNTON BRYAN MORAN.

First Osteopathic Clinic

To the Friend of the People:

The first clinic in osteopathy has been opened in Boston. It is located at the Community House, No. 35 Temple street. This house is full of student lodgers, attending the different educational institutions of this city. The clinic is designed to help the community about the merits of this treatment. As many of the students are from the West, where there is some demand for this school of medical treatment, the clinic will not only serve the community, but the students as well.

The public are also cordially invited.

KNOW YOUR WEAK POINTS---THEN WIN

By DR. FRANK CRANE

JOHNNY QUINLAN, in "The Fall Guy," says, "Now that I know I'm a sap maybe I won't be as big a one."

There is a lot of truth in this.

Few people make dunces out of themselves trying to sing if they know that they can't sing. It is the people who can't sing but think they can who burden the world.

If a boy can't fight and knows it he generally manages to keep out of trouble. It is the one who can't fight but thinks he can lick Dempsey who comes home with the black eye and the loose teeth.

No doctor can do much for a desperately sick man who insists he is well.

Humility, which is the basis of many virtues, may be translated into everyday terms as "facing the facts."

When you face the facts you may find you are walking on a plateau when you imagined it was a mountain top; but at least you will be on solid ground to begin climbing.

Look around and you can see on all sides people who are holding down big jobs and doing important work who are not world beaters and who know it.

It is the man who knows he is not quite big enough to fill his job but works his head off to make as few slips as possible, who continues to hold down the place. And eventually his capacity grows.

It is the girl who is afraid she can't cook and take care of the house and make a good wife, but who works hard to keep on learning and does the best she can, who makes the most successful wife.

It is the President who does not think himself omniscient or his judgment infallible but who keeps in touch with the consensus of public opinion who accomplishes the most in his administration.

When we realize our own insecurity we are more open to suggestions and ideas than when we imagine ourselves safe and indispensable.

"EDISON'S STAR" IS REALLY VENUS

By Garrett P. Serviss
Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

THE origin of most of the wonderful legends and myths that have mystified and delighted the world for so many centuries, giving rise to whole libraries of poetry and romance in many languages, is probably indicated in the letter that here follows:

"Would you kindly let me know if it is true that Mr. Edison shoots an electric star in the heavens at night? Also how it is done, and from where?

"Mrs. J. M. S., New York."

Here is a myth, born, developed and become as irrepressible as the cricket on the hearth, in our own time. I remember its birth myself, although I do not know who its celestial father or mother was. It sprang into being in the eighties of the last century, during one of Venus's periodical returns to the throne of the Evening Star. It was at the time when Edison was attracting universal attention by his experiments in developing the electric light, in defiance of the poohpoohing of certain academical scientists tangled in the web of theory.

Then somebody in New York, seeing Venus one evening glowing with astonishing brightness in the twilight over the New Jersey hills, launched the word:

Nothing could be better suited to catch the popular fancy. Many actually believed that Edison did send up a balloon with an electric light to test his invention. Night after night people watched it and pointed it out to others. If any one better informed told them that it was a real star—indeed a real world, the planet Venus—that they were admiring, they laughed and replied:

"Nonsense, did you ever see a natural star as bright as that? I never did, and I don't believe there is any. No sir, that's Edison's and ain't she bright?"

No, madam, Mr. Edison does not shoot an electric star into the heavens at night. Mr. Edison is a very practical man, else he would not have achieved the great invention that he did achieve, in spite of discouragement, and of adverse prophecy that thought it was scientific.

But do not turn away from the subject, now that you have touched it. The present renewal of the legend is no doubt due to somebody's having glimpsed Venus low in the west close after sunset, for that beautiful world is once more climbing into the throne of the Evening Star, and for months to come will grow brighter and more splendid amidst the fading glow of the departing sun, and the deepening shadow of twilight.

Venus is worth more than billions of electric lights! She may have them beaming on her surface, constellated in her cities, brighter and more magnificent than the best of ours. Give your imagination a little rein when you look at Venus in her glory. Remember that she is certainly a world of the same physical measure as this world of ours, although as to her spiritual, or if you prefer, psychic, value we know nothing. Science has not yet detected by its observations any evidence on that point—no signs of her inhabitants. But there is something enigmatical about her.

You will be surprised at her excessive brightness. Late in the Fall she will be so brilliant that if you go round the corner of a building in the darkness, where you can catch her rays by themselves you will find that she casts a shadow. Sometimes she is visible in the daylight.

Napoleon once saw her at full noon, and being, like Alexander, steeped in fatality and instinct, with imagination, he thrilled with the instantaneous belief that it was his star greeting him from the middle of the blue dome overhead.

Once every 583 days Venus comes back to make her triumphal progress through the evening heavens. The Chaldean shepherds, the ancient Egyptian pyramid builders, the world-conquering Romans, and thousands of years before them the vanished races of the pictured Neolithic caverns, saw and admired that wonderful orb, that diamond lamp, gleaming at the closing gates of night. Watch her at Christmas and at New Year; she will then add a celestial splendor to the holiday season.

DO YOU EVER HELP OUT NEGLECTED CHILDREN

You have been passing frequently a poor, neglected looking child.

Do you make any effort to find out what that child needs?

Is it sickness at home that causes neglect?

Is it loss of father or mother?

Is it a shiftless environment?

Is there any way that you could help?

A kind word occasionally would gain the confidence of the ragged boy. Perhaps an inquiry as to what he can do to earn a living might start that boy on the road to independence.

There are a lot of inexpensive things one might do for the less fortunate children in a neighborhood.

The great point is to let your own prosperity make a more understanding friend of man in general.

It does not pay to pauperize people nor be so lavish that you become the victim of leeches, but you can have a heart.
